The forests of Madhya Pradesh hold more than an animated wildlife. They hold within them, stories that peer through bushes in the form of gharial, barasingha, bison, peacock, sloth bear.

With the Jungle Book, Rudyard Kipling discovered his story. Maybe it's time you came looking for yours.

WELCOME TO THE ‘BIG EIGHT’ CONTINENT

The Indian subcontinent is one of the great ‘hotspots’ of the world for safari-goers. It can boast of more than the ‘big five’, with more cat species than Africa - including the world's favourite big cat, four bear species, wolves, an ape species and both squirrels and snakes that can fly! Its landscapes range from humid rainforests, arid deserts, mangrove swamps and wooded jungles through to the world’s highest mountains. The choice is extraordinary and mind-blowing.

Furthermore, you can combine any one of these wildlife destinations with vibrant heritage, colourful history and the warm hospitality of an ancient culture.

As a traveller, you will also appreciate that choosing any one of the operators, agents or accommodation providers highlighted in this guide means real peace of mind. Each operation has set out to not only ensure you have a life enhancing and memorable journey, but every business has made a commitment to ensure your visit supports both the wildlife you see and the rural communities bordering these parks through our internationally recognised PUG eco-rating certificate.

So now you really can enjoy your wild break - as a conservation traveller - and help save the planet and its wildlife.

Read on to find out more. This updated issue covers not only India, Nepal but also our first member in Bhutan. Our presence there will expand over the coming months.

Happy visits.

TOURISM, THE ROPE THAT BINDS
But India needs a new breed of economists and leaders
By Bittu Sahgal, Editor, Sanctuary Asia

I was on the river in the wildlife-rich Tale Valley Sanctuary in Arunachal Pradesh on August 1, 2001, on an official site visit to the Subansiri on behalf of the Indian Board for Wildlife. I was investigating claims by the promoters of the Lower Subansiri Hydroelectric Project that “no threatened plants or animals existed in the Lower Subansiri Valley.”

The leopard and elephant spoor I had seen had put paid to that casual claim within five minutes of disembarking from the boat. Several very credible naturalists had surveyed the area over the years and consistently affirmed that the Lower Subansiri Valley was one of the richest biodiversity vaults in India. Much more than countries such as Rwanda or Botswana, the Northeast was made for tourism, which could guarantee every man, woman and child a dignified living, with a much, much higher standard of living than they now enjoy.

But such opinions do not sit well unfortunately, across planners and politicians who understand little about sustainability and even less about development. Their mantra is “Show me the Money” or “Show me the Votes, fast.” Consequently, Himalayan slopes have been deforested; mighty rivers such as the Ganges and Brahmaputra have been poisoned; cities have been assaulted by rapacious constructions with virtually no environmental mitigation or protection steps taken. The consequences have been felt, less by planners and more by the people and wildernesses they write of casually as “acceptable collateral damage”.

Adding to this litany of environmental horrors, almost half a million poverty-striken farmers and fisher folk have chosen to commit suicide in the decade gone by. Rather than face the climate-related crop failures and empty nets that left them unable to pay back loans taken for chemical pesticides and fertilisers, or motorised boats and nets... heads of families chose to give up on life. This, if nothing else, should have woken our Rip Van Winkles (Kumbakaranas) to the possibility of a winwin situation that welds the objectives of biodiversity conservation, social and economic welfare and climate change mitigation, using ecologically sensitive and socially just tourism as the rope that binds. By returning farms and landholdings carved from forests to their natural state, millions of people living in communities close to our sanctuaries and National Parks could privately own and run wildlife conservancies on their own properties.

Of course this is easier said than done. For this happy occurrence, we must somehow cajole economists and planners into abandoning intellectual arrogance, ecological ignorance and the ever-present avarice that is the handmaiden of big money.

Here is what the Indian Government says: “India is a multi-destination country with a variety of tourist attractions and facilities. It is the second largest net foreign exchange earner by way of invisible exports. Tourism creates more jobs than any other sector for every rupee invested. It has a major role in promoting large-scale employment opportunities.”

Here is what the Indian government does: Truncate the National Board of Wildlife to facilitate oil exploration, thermal power projects, highways, power lines, limestone and other mining, irrigation and water supply projects, oil pipelines, limestone mining, border fencing and other defence projects. Most of these will seriously hurt the sustainable tourism income that India hopes to earn, particularly close to Tiger Reserves such as Tadoba and Nagera in Maharashtra, Pench in Madhya Pradesh, the Rann of Kutchh Wild Ass Sanctuary in Gujarat, Periyar in Kerala and Dampa in Mizoram.

Tourism is not going to be the only casualty of this misadventure. Since economists have no tools to measure ecosystem services, the only way they will be able to satisfy their GDP ambitions is to allow forests to be cut, or drowned because standing trees do not show up on their faulty calculators. The most life-saving, economically vital infrastructures – forests, rivers, grasslands, swamps, glaciers, corals and coasts – are therefore considered less valuable than wastelands, which can at least be used to dump toxics (that is not yet allowed by law in bio diverse areas).

No smart economists have emerged to measure the immense services offered by natural ecosystems that gift us flood control, water supply, oxygen supply, carbon sequestration and storage and the fertility that is bequeathed to our farms. The moment growth goes down, the GDP-chasers begin to dig into our natural resource vault to plunder a bit more to artificially boost the economy. Their vision extends only to the extent that their tenures last and they crave the accolades and spotlight that is shone on them by their peers. But their days (and reputations) are numbered.

Nature is not going to send out judgments, only consequences. Deforest the planet...you get floods and droughts; deplete oceans...you get empty fishing nets and hunger; kill soils with pesticides and fertilisers... soil organisms die and, ultimately, soils will stop delivering food; burn ungodly quantities of coal and oil...you get a warped climate, with its attendant cyclones, diseases and the manifold uncertainties that make a mockery of all financial projections.

Nature tourism is a conservation tool, an economic tool, a social justice tool and a climate change mitigation tool. But as with any tool, it can be used expertly or inexpertly. TOFTigers is trying to nudge India and the world in the right direction. As the Editor of Sanctuary Asia, I am happy to be working towards the same objective, irrespective of how high that mountain promises to be.
NORTH INDIA

The Northern region is largely associated with the Himalayan ranges and the mysterious Ghost of the Mountains - the snow leopard. The pristine Gangotri National Park is where you can find both sitting at an altitude of a little over 7,000 metres above sea level. The origin of the holy river Ganges, the towering Gaumukh glacier, falls within this park. Mammals such as the surefooted caprids, the Himalayan blue sheep, red fox, Himalayan black bear, brown bear, Himalayan tahr, Himalayan musk deer, Himalayan weasel, Himalayan ibex, and bharal are all found here. Lammergeier, griffon vulture, yellow-billed choughs, orange-flanked bush robin, koklass pheasant, monal, Himalayan snowcock and snow pigeon are some of the beautiful birds that reside here.

Come down South a tad for the Rajaji National Park and Corbett Tiger Reserve with their verdant expanses of forests, blue rivers and white rocks. Asian elephants, tigers, leopards, hog deer, goral, jungle cats, sloth bears, barking deer, jackals, Indian porcupine and yellow-throated martens are some of the mammals that call these parks home.

WEST INDIA

When we think of West India, we think of the last and only remaining abode of the Asiatic lions, the Gir National Park in Gujarat. Today, the conservation efforts of the Gujarat government and forest management have seen the lion population reach in the range of 500.

The harsher and ever so unique habitat of Thar Desert is a beautiful sandy, brown expanse in the State of Rajasthan. Almost 3,000 square kilometres of this desert forms the Desert National Park. As exceptional as this National Park is, just as exceptional is its distinctive wildlife. The endemic reptile species like the laungwala toad-headed agama, spiny-tailed lizard, saw-scaled viper to name a few can be seen here; not to mention the charismatic mammals of the desert like the chinkara, Indian fox, desert cat, desert hare and many more. On the Eastern edge of this desert, in the ancient folds of the Aravalli Hills lies Ranthambhore Tiger Reserve, home of the most well-documented tigers in the world, reigning over ancient hill top ramparts and amongst ruined palaces on lotus covered lakes.

Living up to the adjective ‘interesting’ is the Kutchh Desert Sanctuary in Gujarat. It is a true saline desert, which seasonally gives rise to the saline wetland areas that last a couple of months before turning into a saline desert again. Apart from a heavenly spectacle of thousands of flamingos that flock to the Flamingo City here, it offers a glimpse into the wildlife of millions of years ago too. Fossils can be found aplenty on Jurassic and Cretaceous period rock remnants in certain areas of the sanctuary.

EAST INDIA

The forests in the Eastern part of India boast of unique flora and fauna. Endangered animals such as one-horned rhinoceros, the gargantuan wild buffalos and the critically endangered brow-antlered deer have made this unique topography their home. The world’s largest mangrove estuary, the Sundarbans, lies in West Bengal. Sundarbans Tiger Reserve is a unique ecosystem in which all the plants and animals found here have adapted themselves to the estuarine life of the mangrove forest swamp. The high salinity, extreme tides, strong winds, high temperatures, oxygen-depleted soils have all shaped this unique biome. It’s a reptilian wonderland. Saltwater crocodile, water monitor, king cobra, monocelate cobra and the river terrapin are just some of the species that thrive here.

One of the densest tiger forests in the world, the Kaziranga National Park is also one the best-protected wildlife areas in the country. This is a haven for large herbivores and has in turn been able to sustain a healthy population of tigers. Kaziranga’s wetlands sustain a varied diversity of mammals, reptiles, avian species and plants.
CHOOSING WHERE TO GO

CENTRAL INDIA

The Central Indian landscape is adorned with Vindhya, Satpura, Aravalli, Maikal and Ajanta mountain ranges that enconce amazing flora and fauna species biodiversity within the several Wildlife Sanctuaries and Tiger Reserves. Without a doubt, one of the most exciting Tiger Reserves in Central India is the Tadoba-Andhari Tiger Reserve. The landscape within this park is beautifully dominated by bamboo and teak. Situated in Chandrapur district of Maharashtra, TATR is home to diverse mammal, reptiles, birds and plant species. Another popular tiger destination in Central India is the Bandhavgarh Tiger Reserve whose allure is amplified by the remnants of history that bejewels the park such as the Shesh Shaiva, a giant, arresting statue of Vishnu from the 10th century A.D., that lies reclined at the base of the legendary Bandhavgarh Fort. Walk or trek in the Satpura hills and lake shoreline, spot a famous tigress and her cubs in Pench or enjoy the varied scenic beauty of Panna and marvel at its restoration.

Kanha Tiger Reserve is another spectacle that passes off as one the best-managed wildlife reserves in the country. Here populations of handsome and threatened raptors such as the long-billed vulture can be sighted and the world’s only population of barasingha call Kanha its home.

SOUTH INDIA

The Nilgiri Biosphere Reserve spans across more than 5,000 square kilometres of the pristine Western Ghats of South India replete with moist, evergreen, dry and tropical forests. Some of the best Tiger Reserves, National Parks and sanctuaries such as Bandipur, Nagarahole and Mudumalai and many more like the picturesque regions of Coorg Valley and Valparai fall under this UNESCO designated Biosphere Reserve. The endangered and endemic lion-tailed macaque and Nilgiri tahr are found in this one-of-its-kind Western Ghats ecosystem.

The tropical lake forest, Periyar Tiger Reserve holds and protects the precious Periyar Lake that attracts all creatures great and small. This reserve is made up of diverse habitats and is an excellent site to sight the endangered dholes, gaur and elephants. A true birdwatchers’ paradise, this forest boasts of birds such as the great hornbill, Malabar pied hornbill, Malabar grey hornbill, Malabar trogon, changeable hawk eagle, vernal hanging parrot to name a very few.

NEPAL

Nepal, the land of the Himalayas, historic cities and lush forests is home to a wide range of flora and fauna owing to extreme variations in its altitude and climate - from the sweltering heat of the Terai region to the freezing cold of the Himalayan highlands. Start with the Terai lowlands - a belt of well-watered floodplains with tall grasslands interposed with riverine and hardwood sal forests. Musk deer, blue bull, one-horned rhinoceros, black buck, the royal Bengal tiger, gharial, marsh mugger crocodile and the last of a breed of Asiatic wild buffalo all roam here. The Royal Chitwan and Bardia National Parks are located here and offer nature lovers a good look at most of these residents and many more. In the Churia range, look for ancient fossil deposits of Pleistocene mammals long extinct in the subcontinent.

As you go higher in the North towards the Mahabharat range, you find hills covered by deodar, oak, birch and maple. These forests are home to deer, leopard, ghoral serow and the Impeyan pheasant, which is Nepal’s national bird. Climb higher nearer to the alpine mountains that are the haunt of the snow leopard and its prey - the blue sheep and Himalayan tahr. The varied ecosystems sprouts over 300 species of orchids, eleven of which are endemic to Nepal. Whether you want to trek, relax, or view its diverse wildlife, you will find yourself immersed in this treasure trove of natural beauty.

Preparing for your visit

Welcome to the Jungle.

Crisp mornings, scorching afternoons and chilly evenings typify most parks in India, with safaris restricted to morning and evening drives. While park management, suitable accommodation, good naturalists and great wildlife sightings are all essential to your trip, what really makes or breaks the wilderness experience is your attitude. With the world at your fingertips (through the Internet) it takes little effort to ensure that you make the most of any sojourn into the wild as unobtrusively as possible.

Park Etiquette

Wildlife tourism can provide a huge fillip to conservation efforts, but rowdy tourists often sour the experience for other tourists, park managers and wildlife alike. While in the park, please remember to:

- Wear muted tones. Flashy jewellery and neon clothing are best kept for other occasions. Choose tones of green, olive, brown and khaki for your time in the forest.
- Exit the park on time. Dallying in the jungle past your exit time may marginally increase your chances of seeing a big cat, but it also puts a strain on the park administration that will be deployed to escort you out.
- Respect your driver and guide. These two individuals are your jungle interpreters. It is best to listen to them while in their company. In case of any problems, a complaint can always later be registered with the Park Director.
- Keep it clean. Littering is unwise at the best of times, but in the forest it is wholly unacceptable. Store any trash in your vehicle and dispose of it responsibly once you are back at your resort. Tigers should not be chewing plastic bottles!
- Stay silent. Oh, the jungle is very exciting, but your visit will yield so much more if you keep the volume down. This includes not just containing your exclamations of joy when you spot a big cat, but also keeping your cell phones on silent and ensuring your driver doesn’t blow the horn.
- Stay in your zone. Tourist vehicles are assigned specific zones or routes to ensure that traffic is evenly spread across the tourism zone so as to cause the least disturbance to wildlife.
- Check your flash. Camera toters, this is aimed at you. Please make sure your flash is off before you enter the park. Startling a wild animal while you take a picture is avoidable.
- Report anomalies. Whether it is a grievously injured animal, a suspected trap or a fellow tourist flouting the rules, take accountability and report it locally or via TOFTigers (admin@toftindia.org). Backing up your report with a photograph or video will be appreciated.
- Appreciate it all. The forest ecosystem is made up of a myriad of little miracles. Unfortunately, many tourists become so enraptured by mega mammals that they forget to pay attention to other flora and fauna. Observe everything and you won’t be disappointed.
- Never get out of your safari vehicle - not even if you drop your hat or want a perfect selfie. One act of foolish daredevilry could cost you dearly. No matter how passive a wild animal looks, their space must be respected.
This beautiful, vast, diverse country is made for open-hearted explorers. With some preparation and a positive attitude, India’s wilds will reveal infinite magical moments to nature lovers.

Enjoy your trip!

JUNGLE TIPS

Now that you know how to behave while in the park and have sufficiently fortified yourself against untoward incidents, you can go the extra mile to create your perfect forest holiday.

- You’ve probably already packed a number of field guides for your trip. But did you know that there are also innumerable apps that you can download on your smartphone or tablet to enhance your wildlife experience? From identifying bird song to giving photography tips - there’s an app for every kind of jungle explorer.

- Before you leave, reach out to someone who knows the ins and outs of your chosen destination. Not only will they give you good tips, they could also guide you towards their favourite naturalist, guide or forest guard whom they know, from experience, will show you a good time.

- The indigenous communities that live around so many of India’s Protected Areas are an untapped repository of knowledge on natural history. Take the time to engage with the locals to learn about their history and relationship with the land. Perhaps you will even be invited for a meal to one of their homes in the bargain. Respect their privacy and treat them sensitively.

- While in the jungle, keep your eyes peeled for wild animal spoor! Anything from footprints to scat can give you clues to the wildlife that inhabits an area. Be uninhibited in questioning your guide - they are trained naturalists who are there to share their knowledge!

- Your field gear is often a crucial part of your travels. Before you leave home, double-check your chargers, batteries and gadgets.

- Protect yourself against the searing Indian heat. All this takes is lathering on some high SPF sunscreen and wearing a hat or cap. Additionally, keep yourself hydrated.

- Bugs abound in areas of high biodiversity. Non-toxic mosquito repellent or even eucalyptus or citronella oil should be a part of your jungle kit and liberally applied at key hours like dusk.

YOUR SUPPORT : OUR INVESTMENT

Using this publication as the basis of your visit, you will have already played a role in helping local communities to thrive and become stakeholders in protecting the wildlife and wildernesses you have seen, but should you wish to do more, here are ways you can invest in a park’s long term protection.

Support a Village Wildlife Guardian
Support one of our Guardians, a local villager who provides vital intelligence on the movement of wildlife in and around a tiger park and helps to prevent poaching and illegal activities in his patch. We regard them as a park’s ‘second protection force’.

You can do this privately or through a foundation or corporate from just ₹15,000 in India (or US$250/£150 from abroad) - which is three months of vital support for a watcher including a part time wage, smartphone, training and support.

Nature Guide

An introductory guide to just some of the floral and faunal treasures found in India, Nepal and Bhutan.
There is so much here for all your senses. Stay alert, scan the forests and listen to the many new sounds; the chorus of birds and the alarm calls of animals. Your naturalist guide will point things out to you but spend time just listening. Ask to stop the vehicle when you want to see something and use silence to hear exactly what is going on. You really can learn to read the wild - much like our ancestors once did.

The Indian subcontinent is a whole ecosystem of wondrous life forms and beautiful creatures. Here is just a snapshot of some of the most common mammals that you might see on a specific safari.

India’s most charismatic and the world’s most favourite creature, the majestic tiger is a safari-goer’s ultimate prize to spot. Today many tigers and tigresses (and their cubs) can be seen in many of India’s Tiger Reserves, having grown up with the hustle and bustle of visitors and their vehicles, cameras and excited chatter. Many tigers have their own Facebook page, or you can read about them and their family histories, or follow them on www.tigernation.org.

The tiger is the world’s biggest cat (weighing up to 230 kg) and hunts and moves mostly at night and rests by day. However dawn and dusk are good times to see them on the move. Lots of water sources, good den sites, better protection and plenty of food including wild pig, sambar deer and spotted deer, has ensured that healthy tiger populations now exist in most Tiger Reserves in India and Nepal. A census in 2014 highlighted some 2,226 adult tigers living in India and a further 200 in Nepal, across some 40,000 square kilometres of protected tiger habitat. Numbers are up in the last few years - but down from 100,000 only a century ago, and so tigers remain highly endangered.

Dominant males have large territories to oversee - often with two to four breeding tigresses under their protection bringing up their cubs - and it’s a tough job, often fighting off marauding males and keeping an eye on females. Tigresses on the other hand are good breeders and keeping their own cubs (average of two cubs for up to two years) safe and fed requires cunning, daring, experience, skill, love and a dollop of luck - oh and a very strong long term male mate and protector. Tigers are wary of man and they only become man-eaters if food is very scarce, or if they are too old or wounded to catch other prey.

Listen out for the alarm calls of deer and langurs as tigers move through the forest, making your job easier to find one and if you hear one calling - you’re close!
Asian elephant (Elephas maximus)
Revered as the Lord Ganesha, it is India’s largest and probably most intelligent land mammal weighing 3,000 kilograms and lives up to 60 years. Elephants principally live in North Eastern, Northern and Southern forests of India and in the Nepalese Terai. Only males have large tusks, but it is the matriarch that leads herds of family members. It is thought that there are only 25,000 of them left in the subcontinent. These mighty beings kill probably 500 people a year in conflicts with farmers - so show some respect!

Asiatic lion (Panthera leo)
Over 400 Asiatic lions live only in Gir National Park in Gujarat, where protection saved it from extinction a hundred years ago. They live in small prides of two to five females with a maned male only joining for food and mating. They mostly eat chital and the cattle of the Maldhari herders who live in unique harmony with them. Listen for the male’s roar with the end grunts - it makes the hair on your neck stand!

Indian one-horned rhinoceros (Rhinoceros unicornis)
This one-horned, slate grey, armour plated relic of evolution weighs in at up to 2,000 kilograms and was brought back from near extinction a 100 years ago. They now number 1,750 in the wild mainly in the grasslands of Terai and North Eastern river basins. Males and females look similar. They are creatures of habit that often walk the same paths and, being territorial, ‘toilet’ in the same dump each day, making them an easy catch for photographers - and poachers!

Asiatic wild buffalo (Bovidae arnee)
Once huge herds lived across India, but today only remnants of these large, black and dangerous bovids (wild cattle) live in small woodlands, grasslands and marsh pockets in North East and Central India. Both males and females have horns and the largest horn in the world was recorded at over two metres wide! If you see them stomp their feet, shake their head and snort – get out of their way! They are the wild stock of all of today’s domestic buffalo across the subcontinent.

Leopard (Panthera pardus)
Leopards are very adaptable big cats, with beautiful black rosettes on a clear yellow coat. It’s a real treat to see, because it’s the eternal, but far smaller, enemy of the tiger. Mostly nocturnal, it hides during the day. Its rasping mating call - like the sound of wood being sawed - is unmistakable at night. They hunt smaller prey and haul it up trees away from other carnivores.

Sloth bear (Melursus ursinus)
The shaggy black long haired Bhalu of Jungle Book fame is a great bear to see wandering the forest, digging up termites or pulling bark off trees to get at tasty ants. Their sharp claws are very dangerous and they like to stand on their hind legs to get a better view as their sight is not very good. See a mother with her cubs riding on her back and you will have just witnessed a once in a lifetime treat.

Gaur (Bos gaurus)
The gaur is the largest ox in the world, often called the Indian bison. With a huge muscular frame of 800 to 1,200 kilograms, mature males are jet black, while females and young are coffee brown in colour. Reintroduced to the parks in 2010, they are now in good health and breeding well. They often become tiger food, but can be too big and dangerous when in small herds.
The dhole, as it is known in India, is a reddish brown forest dog. They live and hunt in collaborative large or small packs depending on the season and available food like deer and pig. Elusive, but often the most exciting animals to watch, they are sociable and playful when relaxed, yet exciting and dramatic when out hunting. Every animal and ground bird in the forest is scared of wild dogs.

Wild dog (Cuon alpinus)
The dhole, as it is known in India, is a reddish brown forest dog. They live and hunt in collaborative large or small packs depending on the season and available food like deer and pig. Elusive, but often the most exciting animals to watch, they are sociable and playful when relaxed, yet exciting and dramatic when out hunting. Every animal and ground bird in the forest is scared of wild dogs.

Caracal (Caracal caracal)
If you happen to see this beautiful medium sized cat then you are blessed. It’s elusive, solitary and shy, but instantly recognisable with its tall black tufted ears and pinkish brown fur. It uses stealth, speed and agility to catch small mammals like hares and is particularly good at catching birds.

Common langur (Semnopithecus entellus)
These widespread and predominantly leaf-eating monkeys with long tails for a life in the trees are worshipped by Hindus as Hanuman, the Monkey God. They live in single male groups or troop of ten to a hundred. Look out for its friendship with the spotted deer and listen out for a sentinel’s alarm bark – it means that it’s seen a carnivore nearby! Several rarer langur species live precious lives in forest patches across India.

Hoolock gibbon (Bumpithecus hoolock)
India’s only ape, this long armed, tailless primate is an amazing gymnast and can be seen brachiating through the tree canopies. It is also the most melodious singer of haunting songs - a jungle karaoke at dawn! Male and females are of two distinctly different colours; females are golden blonde and males totally black except for fabulous white eyebrows. Pairs are monogamous and live together for life - but are sadly being greatly affected by loss of forests, particularly tree canopies.

Wild pig (Sus crofa)
A large forest pig, the ‘forest’s farmer’, the wild pig is able to dig up forest floors and grasslands with its tough snout looking for roots and tubers – but will eat almost anything! Strong and weighing up to 100 kilograms, they will put up a rapid flight and a brave fight against any carnivore if caught. Being great breeders, they are often seen in sounders of up to twelve little piglets with their mother. Being tasty food, they have to be tough and fast to survive.

Marsh crocodile (Crocodylus palustris)
Observe the mugger on the shoreline of the Tadoba Lake or Andhari River. It likes to snatch small mammals drinking, or eat fish - it’s not too fussy. They can grow up to sixteen feet and 450 kilograms and have a healthy appetite. Never forget that these reptiles have been around for 220 million years and are well adapted to their lifestyle.

Porcupine (Hystrix indica)
The nibblings of porcupines are likely to be the only thing you see of this amazing giant rodent because it sleeps underground during the day. Its dorsal hairs have evolved into spiky black and white quills and are a danger to any creature that threatens them. Beware! It attacks by running backwards.

Jackal (Canis aureus)
You may have seen them near villages; they are handsome canids with golden and black haired coats and black tipped tails. They are always busy in the park, hunting and scavenging, singularly, in pairs or small packs for small mammals, insects and birds. You can often hear them yelping or barking like dogs.

The Indian subcontinent is a birder's paradise. Never is there a dull moment on a safari. When you are not watching out for mammals, look up and enjoy the staggering birdlife that graces landscapes from the heights of the Himalayas to the waters of the Sundarbans. Take a good guide, pack some binoculars and a bird guide and you are set for a fantastic time on any safari destination in India, both inside and outside parks and also in city parks and farmlands. Here are a small number of easily recognised birds to tick off your list.

The Indian subcontinent is a birder's paradise. Never is there a dull moment on a safari. When you are not watching out for mammals, look up and enjoy the staggering birdlife that graces landscapes from the heights of the Himalayas to the waters of the Sundarbans. Take a good guide, pack some binoculars and a bird guide and you are set for a fantastic time on any safari destination in India, both inside and outside parks and also in city parks and farmlands. Here are a small number of easily recognised birds to tick off your list.

COMMON BIRDS

Trees are something that we all have a unique affinity to, yet we are all too often unappreciative of them because they are always there. India and Nepal have a unique religious and mythological relationship with trees, with sacred groves as well as sacred individual trees used as shrines in villages and towns across the country. There are over 2,500 varieties of trees on the subcontinent but the once vast forests have all but disappeared in the last 200 years. Here are just a few very special ones to spot on a safari.

Mango tree (Mangifera indica)

Mangoes are India’s best loved fruit. The tree’s huge 20 metre high evergreen canopy and delicious fruit provides food, shade and shelter for both man, birds and animals. Hugely popular in villages and often planted along the roadside to feed pilgrims, it flowers from April and mango season is celebrated from April onwards when the fruits ripen.

Mahua tree (Madhuca indica)

Valued above all other trees in Central India, it’s never felled and often stands in tribal villages when all other trees have gone. Its flowers are highly nutritious with deer, monkeys, pig and bears gorging them, but villagers collect them just as fervently to brew into an alcoholic spirit, often setting alight the surrounding forest to collect them. Mahua collecting season in April is dangerous for the villagers - surprising tigers and tipsy bears alike.

Banyan tree (Ficus bengalensis)

Unmissable, this huge parasitic fig tree, with aerial roots that grow downward, holding up massive extended branches, holds the title for being the broadest tree in the world. One specimen in Kolkata occupies two hectares, can shade 20,000 people, has 3,000 prop roots and is 300 years old! Its shelter and fruit is the lifeblood for a host of birds and animals and it is considered sacred. It has its very own wasp species to pollinate it too!

Peepal tree (Ficus religiosa)

Sacred to both Hindus and Buddhists alike, this long living strangler fig is even regarded as a Brahmin itself, ensuring it lives to very old age (up to two millennia) wherever it grows. Strangling its hosts with roots that end up forming the trunk, it can grow into a large eighteen metre high tree whose long-tailed leaves can clatter noisily in the wind. Leaves are of a lovely red when newly appeared.

Arjuna’s tree (Terminalis Arjuna)

These trees are found most often beside water and rivers in Central and Southern India. They are huge impressive hardwood trees with big white grey buttress and root systems that hold back sandy riverbanks. They offer shade to wildlife in summer and its bark has many medicinal uses.

The most spectacular sights of an Indian summer are the ‘Flame of the Forest’ trees blazing with bright orange flowers which squirrels, langurs, parrots and bees love. It grows everywhere, in poor and salty soils too. A floral infusion is used to make red dyes for the festival of Holi, the leaves are used for making disposable plates and fibres are made into rope.

A famous hardwood, teak is native to dry and moist forests in India, but the huge old trees were all but lost by the end of the 1800’s being used for railways and shipbuilding. They are tall, growing up to 40 metres high, though most are now smaller and heavily replanted for forestry. It's easily identified by its white candelabra based flowers in the monsoons. Its huge 30 centimetre long leaves that slowly turn brown and crisp are artistically defoliated by a species of moth larvae before falling to the ground in summer.

These trees form magnificent tall and closed canopy forests across India’s heartlands, from belts in Central India to the Terai region of Nepal. Extensively felled during the Raj period as a hardwood tree, it’s one tree that foresters seem unable to propagate. Aggressively ensuring no other vegetation grows in its dark shade, its understorey is therefore open and interesting to walk through.

An original native of tropical Africa, it is now widespread in Asia with a Persian derived name. The large evergreen spreading shade of the tamarind has fruit pods that are essential to Indian cuisine. Its bark and leaves are invaluable to village medicine cabinets as a carminative and laxative and valuable food for wildlife, livestock and humans alike.

A symbol of good health and a harbinger of good times for centuries, the neem is a mid-sized nearly evergreen tree and hailed as a veritable medicine cabinet as seen in villages across India. Its leaves are used as an insect and pest repellant and neem toddy from its trunk is used as an effective general antiseptic. Today, apart from being seen as a miracle tree in the cosmetic industry, it is also used as bio-pesticide, contraception, soil nitrogen regulator and has many other uses.

This tree has a very distinctive branching and thorny trunk with showy red flowers that attracts birds between February and April before dropping its pod burst, laden with ‘cotton floss’ to snow upon the ground in summertime. This floss is often used for filling pillows and bedding.

The most common tree in the hot dry slopes of the Aravalli Hills, the dhok is best seen in Ranthambhore. It’s a deciduous silvery bark tree that’s nibbled to a common grazing height by spotted deer and sambar in the hot summer months. Its silvery bare trees in mid-summer can be spotted from afar. It is said to be the toughest timber in India.

Bamboos are actually grass with many varieties of it found throughout India and Nepal. The most common is Bambusa bamboo in forests of deciduous moist Central and Southern India, growing up to 30 metres tall. They have a dark green stalk or culm and flower once every 40 to 60 years. With this mass seeding - a forest feast for reptiles, small mammals and their prey begins, but it also leads to a massive dieback of the forest storey which can bring famine for others. It is an important cash crop for village communities used in pulp and paper, thatching and roofing.
Much of your safari will be taken in a vehicle, yet you will miss 90% of what is in the wild if you don’t get down and dirty on foot or even on your knees. All creatures great and small leave tell-tale signs of their existence in the trees, along the roads and riverbanks of the reserves. A good naturalist or park guide can help you, but here are a few clues to look for.

The foreleg track of a tiger is bigger and much rounder than the hind track. It can be up to thirteen centimetres long and twelve centimetres wide.

Jackal tracks are commonly seen in many parks - often mistaken as dogs. You can see the claw marks easily in their tracks.

Jackal tracks are commonly seen in many parks - often mistaken as dogs. You can see the claw marks easily in their tracks.

The leopard is the most widely distributed large cat in India and it can even be seen in cities. The tracks of a male are larger than that of a female leopard.

A special pug mark to find is the sloth bear. They have two very different tracks, front pad and back pads, but their claws are huge and dangerous!

The elephant is an unmistakable track, crater like, showing us an exact fingerprint of the skin on its foot.

The elephant is an unmistakable track, crater like, showing us an exact fingerprint of the skin on its foot.

What do you think makes these marks on a tree?

Cloven-hoofed mammals and other signs

This group of animals includes many of the cat’s favorite food. If you see lots of tracks like these below, there is a really good chance you are in good big cat territory. They include wild buffalo, gaur, sambar, spotted deer, wild pig and nilgai antelope (relative scale).

MAMMAL TRACKS

Pugmarks without claws
All have four toes and a central pad.

Pugmarks with claws
The difference between cat species and other mammals is that only cats have retractable claws, so with most other mammal tracks like bears, wild dogs, jackals and even porcupines and badgers you can spot claw marks too. Look carefully.

ANIMAL DROPPINGS

Much can be learnt from droppings or ‘scat’. It tells you what animal it is, when it was here, what and when it last ate - so you can even tell how hungry it is! Look out for:

- Gaur and wild buffalo (also cattle)
- Rhino and elephants
- Rhinoceros and elephant
- Deer and antelope species
- From bats, hares and rodents
- Porcupine, crocodile, monitor lizard and monkey
- Wild dogs, jackal, mongoose and civet
- Tigers, leopards, smaller cats and hyena
- Gaur and wild buffalo (also cattle)
Like us, many animals prefer to use roads and wildlife tracks to move through the jungle. It makes tracking them easier!

Do animals have toilets?

Yes. Nilgai antelope and sambar deer both use latrines, often coming back to the same place. This is a territorial marker as well as a useful latrine. Rhinos famously have their own toilet sites, making rhinos easy to find for poachers, who often hide near these latrines.

What is eating this tree bark?

This is the porcupine feeding on its favorite tree bark. Its two front teeth marks are noticeable.

Many animals eat different plants and bark as medicine, to relieve pains. The nibblings of a langur monkey from the Arjuna tree is similar but higher up a tree. It relieves their stomach pains.

OTHER SIGNS TO SEE & SPOT

Both sambar and spotted deer rub the ‘velvet’ off their new antlers. Because deer grow antlers every year you can learn to tell their age from their antlers. The bigger their antlers, the older the animal.

The Wonder of Termite Colonies

These super organisms are highly organised, and build termite mounds of extraordinary strength and size, up to eight to ten foot high in some parks. They are often studied by architects to help them understand building, temperature control and energy saving structures. They are critical to a soil’s fertility as they recycle leaf litter and dung. What you see above ground is only a fraction of what is below ground with mega cities of tunnels and ‘fungal gardens’ to sustain the colony. Millions of individuals are divided into either workers or soldiers to guard the colony, while the queen and king look after the reproductive duties.

Wildlife Parks and Accommodation Providers

Your guide to the parks and the best lodges, resorts and homestays to enjoy your wilderness experience.
TOFTigers is a worldwide business-to-business nature travel campaign charity started in 2005. It is run by passionate nature travel professionals, experts and conservationists, mostly voluntarily, who believe that well-conceived, well-planned and well-managed tourism plays a vital part in helping preserve wild habitat, promoting conservation and in supporting local communities across the Indian subcontinent. Much more work needs to be done in wildlife destinations to achieve this goal – hence this initiative.

In addition to offering extraordinary personal experiences, responsible wildlife tourism also provides a clear economic imperative for protecting forests and helping save their biodiversity, including tigers. Such tourism is one of the only non-extractive industries that can still release real economic value from forests, turn poachers into gamekeepers, passive visitors into passionate advocates and bring marginalised forest communities into the mainstream of sustainable economic life.

Our membership of over 200 travel companies, nature accommodation and service providers from India and across the globe, recognise forests as living breathing ecosystems, with biodiversity services critical to the long-term ecological health of the Indian subcontinent.

It’s critical that all forms of tourism - especially those in and around wilderness areas - are driven down a responsible business framework and that travel professionals, nature conservationists, local communities and governments work hand in hand to achieve this.

The TOFTigers campaign initially focused on a few of the best known tiger viewing parks in India. Today it is increasingly including any number of parks, sanctuaries or wild lands with a vision to help put unknown and unexplored parks on the map as a way of ensuring that tourism pressures are spread further and thinner across wilderness landscapes, with benefits accruing to many areas rather than just a few hotspots.

Each park highlighted in this guide has different attractions, fabulous wildlife, unique flora and fauna and unforgettable nature experiences. We want to encourage you to take more time to explore the variety of wildlife and nature experiences on offer and not simply see a visit to the parks in terms of tiger viewing.

Ultimately, TOFTigers’ power to influence change is derived from the purchasing decisions by you as a safari-goer and by the suppliers of your travel itinerary. We flag up the best suppliers for you with our PUG eco-rating certification, so that you and your travel supplier can now make better and more informed decisions about where to go and where to stay, stimulating better business practices and ensuring more long term conservation and community support by your visit.

By using one of our members listed in this Guide Directory, you are making a magical difference to nature conservation for all our tomorrows. We know that once you have experienced the true spirit of the jungle, you will, like us become an advocate for India’s conservation efforts.

Want to know more - visit our website or email us at info@toftindia.org or join our mailing list at mailing@toftindia.org

PUG RATINGS & KEY REFERENCE PAGE

All the accommodation providers listed in this travel guide have gained PUG certification. This means our professional audit team has visited their property for 24 hours and undertaken a comprehensive review of their operations, their ecological practices and their contribution to the local community and support for conservation. If they pass PUG’s minimum standards they are judged as Good, Quality or Outstanding operations, giving you a real choice to travel right.

Looking for the PUG eco-rating - now recognised by the United Nations backed Global Sustainable Tourism Council - ensures you are making the right choice on your wilderness travels.

PUG Mark Explained:

Outstanding Practice: These are exemplary industry leaders. These providers have a positive impact on the environment, local communities and their clients. They invest both time and money to maintain sustainable tourism practices.

Quality Practice: These providers are environmentally and culturally responsible. They are continuously working to better their operations and enhance their sustainable practices and are working to become exemplary industry leaders.

Good Practice: These providers are low-impact. They make choices based on environmental and social responsibility but have not yet attained best practice in sustainability.

Bandhavgarh Tiger Reserve
Madhya Pradesh

It is hard to imagine as you drive through these forests that this area was originally home to powerful kings and maharajas residing in the large hilltop fort; its meadows were rich agricultural lands tended by farmers and Buddhist monks and sadhus occupied an extensive cave system in 100 BC.

The name bandhavgarh means ‘fort of the brother’ and was gifted by Lord Ram to his brother Lakshman. In the twelfth century the fort was given in dowry to the Baghela clan of which the present Maharaja of Rewa is a direct descendent. After almost continuous occupation, the capital of the Baghelas was moved to Rewa by the nineteenth century and the forests became the hunting reserve of the Maharaja and his guests. Gulab Singh of Rewa shot 480 tigers across his kingdom.

The present Maharaja’s late father in 1968 stopped hunting in these woods and gifted it to the State before it was declared a National Park and later a Tiger Reserve. The park was extended in 1986 and today it covers 1,161 square kilometres, including the buffer areas, in which village communities exist.

Famed over the years for its charismatic male and female tigers that are well documented, it today has over 50 individuals residing within its forests.

The park is divided into three separate tourism zones - Tala, Magdhi and Khitauli.

What you can do inside the park
Game drives in small jeeps are usual and there are some viewing hides. An elephant safari is also possible with separate permission and payment, though not guaranteed. A visit to the hilltop fortress in the Tala zone is a treat; stop by at some of the remarkable handmade caves and visit an imposing ten-metre long statue of Lord Vishnu, carved in the tenth century. In Magdhi stop and enjoy the scenic meadow.

What to look out for
This is not simply a reserve with a high density of tigers and cubs. Keep an eye out for long-billed vultures that circle around the hill fort, dragonflies around watery meadows, chital herds around the pools, sloth bears and the Malabar pied hornbills whose shriek is instantly recognisable. The great forests of sal hardwood trees and ever-changing greens, browns and yellows of the deciduous crocodile bark and tendu trees or clumps of bamboo hide many treasures against the stunning backdrop of the sheer sandstone cliffs of the ancient Vindhya range. This is a park with much to offer the seasoned nature traveller and the first timer.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Walking trails have been set up in Panpatha zone bordering the park taking in some village trails. Shop in Tala village where some small local souvenirs and curios can be had. Short or longer bike trails take in pretty rural village communities like Rancha that will introduce you to rural life and agriculture pressing close to park boundaries.

Conservation issues
Bandhavgarh faces many issues, including illegal deforestation on its borders, wildlife conflict with farmers, a bush meat trade that is affecting prey species like wild pig and spotted deer populations, and poor planning and development that hampers efforts at protection. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org and consider helping with funding or support:

- Bandhavgarh Foundation
- The Corbett Foundation

Mahua Kothi - Taj Safaris

The name Mahua Kothi draws its inspiration from the fragrant mahua or butter tree. The lodge is set in 40 acres of grounds and the original homestead has been tastefully renovated. Stay in kutiyas (jungle village huts) built in the vernacular style of Central India using natural, local materials and textiles. Enjoy your meals in the lush gardens or terraces with food made from produce sourced locally and from the resort’s own kitchen garden. The open kitchen welcomes guests upon arrival where they can watch butter being churned and masala being grounded by hand.

You could also take time for some yoga as well as traditional Indian games of marbles and Chaupad. Bicycles are parked in the courtyards for the use of guests who want to explore and the veranda that runs the length of the building is ideal for star gazing.

Activities / Special Features:
Sit around a bonfire under the sprawling branches of a mahua tree and enjoy cocktails and kebabs; or relax on the terrace of the homestead puffing on an aromatic hookah under the night sky. You may take a guided nature walk with a naturalist, or drive to the village of the Baiga tribe. Interested guests can be a part of their ongoing community initiatives by donating or helping install smokeless wood stoves in village houses, visiting the primary school to distribute nutritional supplements, or watching the bee keeping initiative at a village home.

Accommodation:
The 12 suites are built in the traditional style of Central India. Each is accessed through private courtyards with shaded seating and traditional mud floors. Interiors include wooden shutters, walls in lime and earth washes and handmade pottery roof tiles.

Food:
Enjoy a spread of Indian and international flavours with fresh produce from the resort’s kitchen garden or sourced from local farms. Olive oil is used as the main cooking media along with other exotic ingredients sourced from different parts of the world. Dinners are served on open terraces with a live spit roasting, Khud cooking and traditional folk dancers in the background.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year, but the park itself is only open to the public from 16th October to 30th June.

Location:
Nearest airport - Jabalpur (165 km), Khajuraho (260 km)
Nearest railhead - Jabalpur (165 km), Khajuraho (260 km)
Nearest park gate - Tala (3 km)

Children Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. Screening of wildlife movies; indoor games organised by naturalists; treasure hunt, cooking demonstration; guided nature walks; and community visits are some of the activities they can participate in. "I am a Naturalist" programme for budding naturalists is a 3-5 day module that introduces kids to the finer art of tracking animals using field signs, alarm calls and pug marks. At the end of the programme they take home a certificate.

Skay’s Camp

Skay’s Camp was established by ‘old timers’ Satyendra Tiwari and his English wife, Kay and is run with the help of Satyendra’s brother Hariom and his family. It is their home and you are welcomed as their homestay guest. It is simple accommodation in quiet village surroundings amongst a flower garden, fruit trees, pretty butterflies and cats. Perfect for those who prefer the in-depth knowledge and passion of wildlife aficionados over luxury lodgings.

Their local staff help maintain the land and run the kitchen. The homestay is run in an eco-friendly way. The limited number of rooms offer privacy and a quiet atmosphere where you can commune with nature at your own pace, or wander into the surrounding village or farmlands.

Activities / Special Features:
- Park drives with a naturalist; trips to Bandhavgarh Fort; bird and butterfly walks (subject to condition of entry); slide shows and informal wildlife talks; wildlife library; wildlife gallery; Kay’s art prints can be seen in the gallery.

Accommodation:
Accommodation is in one of 5 simple twin rooms with attached bathrooms.

Food:
All meals, principally vegetarian, are served with authentic local flavours. Much of the fruit and vegetables are home grown.

Bandhavgarh Jungle Lodge

Run by Amit Sankhala, grandson of the founder of Project Tiger Kailash Sankhala in the 1970’s, Bandhavgarh Jungle Lodge is set in ten acres of grounds teeming with wildlife and the sounds of the jungle. Fourteen thatched twin-bedded cottages and eight rooms in two separate villas combine modern comfort with the feel of an Indian village. An organic kitchen garden and a medicinal plant garden supply fresh herbs, fruits and vegetables. The lodge houses a field station, the Kailash Sankhala Conservation Centre and contributes to Tiger Trust.

Opening Times:
Closed from 15th June to 1st October depending on the park opening times.

UNDER PROCESS: Samode Safari Lodge
As you drive through the forests of Bandipur National Park, one sweet fragrance that greets you is of the sandalwood trees that are protected along with the wildlife that abounds here, most often seen in areas cleared of the irrepressible lantana bush. Bandipur National Park is part of the Nilgiri Biosphere Reserve and stretches over 1,282 square kilometres of dense forests, rivers, mountains, gorges and open grasslands. Though part of one of India’s best known and densest tiger habitats (over 700 in the 2014 census) it’s far better for sightings of elephant herds, leopard and wild dog than these big cats.

Together with the adjoining Wayanad Wildlife Sanctuary and Nagarhole and Mudumalai National Parks, it forms the largest Protected Area in Southern India, totalling 2,183 square kilometres. The Nugu, Moyar and Kabini rivers feed this area perennially with gushing waters and host a variety of aquatic birds that are a delight to spot.

The Reserve was once the erstwhile Maharaja Voodiyar’s private hunting ground until 1941 when it became part of a larger National Park called Venugopal Wildlife Park. In 1973, it was recognised as Bandipur National Park and it became one of the fifteen sanctuaries brought under the umbrella of Project Tiger.

What you can do inside the park
You can go for a wildlife safari in a government operated jeep or bus, but your wildlife experience is likely to be far better by opting for walks and drives with naturalists in the forested areas outside the designated tourism zone. For magnificent views, take a ride to Gopalswamy Betta, which is one of the highest peaks in the park at 1,454 metres and where you can also see the thirteenth century fort of the Palegars of Terakanambi. Don’t forget to visit the Mysore Ditch – a 260 metre deep gorge that has been eroded by the Moyar River.

What to look out for
Elephants, tigers, leopards, Indian pangolins, dholes and their prey now move freely between Nagarhole and Bandipur, so keep your eyes peeled. Spot some of the colourful birds chirping away such as the hill myna, yellow-footed green pigeon, white-bellied woodpecker, Malabar parakeet, great hornbill and the crested treeswift.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
A popular attraction is the Madumalai Elephant Camp – a government-run elephant resting camp where you can interact with the majestic pachyderms. For history buffs, the town of Sringapatnam is a must-visit. It is where Tipu Sultan fought and was defeated in 1799 by English Raj forces. It is also famous for the Ranganathittu Bird Sanctuary - one of the best places in India to sight the marsh crocodile.

Conservation issues
For farmers in the 200 villages along the Bandipur forest periphery, the park is a vast pasture for grazing cattle and collection of forest produce, increasing the chances of man-animal conflict. The National Highway 212 passes through the park and speeding vehicles have killed many wild animals. Poor infrastructure and tourism planning could have adverse effects on elephant corridors connecting these areas. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org and consider helping with funding or support:

Dhole’s Den Resort

Not unlike a very contemporary glass-fronted Alpine villa, this is Karrthik Davey and his wife Ingrid’s holiday home. Dhole’s Den gets its name from the Asiatic wild dogs that frequent the area, together with elephant herds and big cats from the bordering park.

The ground floor is large, big and airy for dining and relaxation. Upstairs and in separate villas, spacious guest rooms with sliding doors opening onto terraces give you panoramic and unhindered views of the jungles leading to the blue Nilgiri Mountains beyond. Locally sourced fabric and furnishings have been used for the interiors lending an authenticity to your visit.

Activities / Special Features:
Library with books on wildlife and conservation-based film screenings; camping; meditation area; nature walks; bird safari; visit to local village communities; an observation machaan within the lodge grounds.

Accommodation:
Accommodation is in 5 spacious living units with ensuite bathrooms. High ceilings and glass louvers allow a gentle breeze to flow throughout the day. Attached balconies ensure panoramic views.

Food:
Guests have a varied choice of Indian, South Indian, Chinese and Continental cuisines. Locally sourced food includes fresh organic vegetables and herbs grown in the lodge’s kitchen garden.

Bardia National Park
Nepal

You can saunter around the woodland forests, riverbanks and hills of the Bardia National Park perched on elephant back or enjoy the real privilege of walking with expert naturalists in this beautiful region, little visited in comparison with the better known Chitwan National Park nearer Kathmandu.

Bardia, along with the adjoining Banke National Park, forms a continuous Protected Area network of over 2,231 square kilometres and is home to an increasing population of the Royal Bengal tiger - though its sizeable population of 50 individual tigers in 2014, is no guarantee of sightings. Don't worry because it's home to migratory elephant herds, reintroduced Indian one-horned rhino, leopard and the very rare Gangetic dolphin in the Karnali River.

The park was left wild until 1815. Nepal lost this region to the East India Company through the Sugauli Treaty and was part of British India for 45 years. It returned to Nepal only in 1860 in recognition for supporting the suppression of the Indian Independence movement in 1857. Today, this annexed area is still called Naya Muluk, meaning new country.

Located in the Western Terai region, Bardia is the largest of Nepal’s Protected Areas covering 968 square kilometres and there's plenty to see here. A part of the forests was set aside as the Royal Hunting Reserve but in 1976, it was gazetted as Royal Karnali Wildlife Reserve and was declared a Protected Area. In 1982, it was proclaimed as Royal Bardia Wildlife Reserve and extended to include the Babai River forests as well as the Ramsar site of the Lumbini wetland complex. It gained the status of a National Park in 1988 and since then has made tremendous efforts to protect the wildlife that resides here, even during the recent political troubles and earthquakes.

What you can do inside the park
Jungle safaris are the biggest draw either by jeep or on elephant back to spot the creatures of the wild in their natural habitat. It's also one of the only reserves that allows walking within its borders. Your jeep can take you into the heart of the park from where you go on a walking safari. A boat cruise along the Karnali River is a perfect opportunity to spot gharials, mugger crocodiles and the endangered Gangetic dolphin. Between the safaris, you can enjoy jungle walks and bird watching. It is also possible to camp in the buffer zone forests.

What to look out for
Bardia forests are a wonderful mix of sal trees, open grasslands and riverine woodlands. The open forests make for good tiger sightings and are a good habitat for rhinos and migratory elephant herds who cross the border from Dudhwa Tiger Reserve in India. The rivers support sizeable populations of gharial and mugger crocodiles as well as the Gangetic dolphins. Birdlife is also excellent and includes the rare Bengal florican, the silver-eared mesia and the increasingly endangered sarus cranes.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Bardia is surrounded by many villages and the community most well known in these lowlands of Nepal is the fascinating Tharu community who are famously resistant to the deadly malaria disease and live in beautifully decorated homes. A chance to visit their villages is a must when visiting this part of the country.

Conservation issues
Bardia suffered terribly during Nepal’s Maoist Insurgency. A huge increase in poaching saw tiger numbers plummet from around 80 before the insurgency to just eighteen in 2009. When the Maoists won the elections in 2008, peace brought a renewed commitment to tiger conservation. Happily, the tiger numbers have doubled and researchers are optimistic that their number is now higher still at 50 today. Also, there have been almost no reports of poaching in the last three years - a remarkable feat. Community run conservancies for bordering villagers are working but still need support from travellers. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

Tiger Tops Karnali Lodge

Tiger Tops Karnali Lodge helped put Bardia National Park on the wildlife map many years ago and today continues to offer the same warm Nepalese hospitality in a beautiful setting, nature’s home to its array of creatures great and small. The lodge embraces a strong local identity in its design, adopting traditional building techniques and drawing inspiration from the local Tharu culture.

Getting to observe and know the resident domesticated elephants - their daily routine and distinct personalities - and engaging with their mahouts is an experience not to be missed. The lodge has been cultivating and expanding its organic vegetable farm and is close to self-sufficiency, providing an abundant array of fresh fruit and vegetables for you to enjoy during your stay.

Activities / Special Features:
Jeep and river safari inside the National Park; nature walks; bird watching; organic farm visit; river rafting in Bheri or Karnali Rivers to spot the rare river dolphins; and golden mahseer angling.

Accommodation:
There are 21 very comfortable en suite rooms, 9 signature rooms and 12 traditional rooms with a mixture of local Tharu and contemporary furnishings.

Food:
The organic farm’s freshly harvested produce is used to cook up delicious Nepalese, South Asian and Mediterranean fusion cuisines. The bar will serve up some exotic cocktails.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Nepalgunj (90 km)
Nearest park gate - Bardia (4 km)

Barnawapara Wildlife Sanctuary
Chhattisgarh

The adage ‘big things come in small packages’ couldn’t hold truer than in the case of Barnawapara Wildlife Sanctuary. This 245 square kilometres park is known for its sizeable population of the common leopard, large gaur herds, sloth bears and a host of prey species.

Leopards thrive in this region - free of resident tigers - and they have managed to climb on top of the food chain without any fierce competition from their eternal enemy. Wildlife enthusiasts come here to catch a glimpse of this elusive cat, making this the state's second most popular Wildlife Sanctuary.

The Sanctuary was established in 1976 under the Wildlife Protection Act of 1972 and is a fascinating alternative to the more crowded tiger parks of the country.

The mixed deciduous forests coupled with the sounds of the residents, made by over 150 species of melodious birds make for an ideal wildlife experience.

What to look out for
Leopards are the main attraction here but not everyone gets a chance to see this shy creature as it hides in the dense forest canopy. Other wildlife that reside here are sloth bears, jackals, four-horned antelopes, striped hyenas, chinkara, muntjac, and gaur. The bison is locally known as the gaur. Take in the landscape, which is a mix of flat and hilly terrains and offers picturesque views of rivulets and streams that attract a large number of bird species. Keep an eye out for white-rumped vultures, green avadavats, lesser kestrels and racket-tailed drongos.

What you can do inside the park
Enjoy morning and afternoon jungle safaris and stop to observe wildlife from water towers strategically placed inside the Sanctuary to give you the best wildlife viewing opportunities. Accompanying guides are adept at spotting wildlife.

What to see and do outside the park
Nature walks in the buffer zone of the Sanctuary are a delight as you get a chance to get up close and personal with nature, and spot things and creatures you might have missed otherwise. There are trails designed specifically for birders that take you near meandering water bodies to observe migratory birds.

Muba’s Machaan
Muba offers ten tastefully decorated rustic machaans, houses on stilts, with modern amenities each looking out into the expansive, lush green jungle. Each has a deck for you to sit and enjoy the sights and sounds of the forest that envelope you.

Go for nature and birding walks or treks with the resident naturalist, take a village tour, ride a bullock cart or have a picnic at the Mahanadi River to make the most of your stay. Refuel at the restaurant’s buffet spread of Indian and Mughlai cuisines.

Chitwan National Park
Nepal

World famous as one of the first parks to see tigers regularly in the 1970’s, the rich biodiversity of Chitwan National Park has earned its status as a World Heritage Site as one of the last surviving examples of the natural ecosystems of the Terai region. It was the country’s first National Park declared in 1973 and also holds within its boundary a Ramsar Wetland site, the Beezashari Lake. It is a treasure trove for nature enthusiasts and an early pioneer in some of the best practices in nature tourism and support for conservation.

In these forests, you will find a diversity of wildlife from the largest terrestrial mammal, the elephant, to the smallest, the pygmy shrew! It is most famous for one-horned rhinos and the Bengal tiger of which there are believed to be 120 at the last census. The park covers an area of 932 square kilometres between two East-West river valleys at the base of the Shivalik range of the Himalayas.

Historically, Chitwan was protected by Nepalese kings as it was the hunting ground for aristocrats. King George V and his son, the future Edward VIII, hunted here in 1911 and in just one safari killed 38 tigers and eighteen rhinos! Hunting has been long since banned and poaching activities have been brought under control due to relentless efforts by the government. There has been a recent revival in the population of tigers and herds of rhinos basking in the sun are once again a common sight.

What you can do inside the park
You can hire a jeep from your hotel or local travel operator for a jeep safari and your hotel can arrange for an experienced driver and naturalist who will guide you through the forest. The Narayali River is ideal for boating rides and gives you the chance to view wildlife on the banks with village life in the backdrop. The best way to explore the forest is on foot. It makes your trip rather interesting as essentially you can do a river, jeep and foot safari all together, one after the other.

What to look out for
Apart from the one-horned rhino and the Bengal tiger, keep an eye out for leopards, sloth bears, fishing and jungle cats, golden jackals, crab-eating mongoose and yellow-throated martens. You can also catch a glimpse of the gharial and the marsh mugger on a boating safari. Chitwan also has one of the highest concentrations of birds in the world, with more than 22 globally threatened species in its boundaries such as the critically endangered Bengal florican, slender-billed vulture, white-rumped vulture, spotted eagle and red-headed vulture. It also receives several migratory species such as the greater spotted eagle, eastern imperial eagle and Pallas’s fish eagle.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
The visitor centre at Sauraha and a museum at Kasara provide fascinating information on wildlife and conservation programmes. The Women’s User Group souvenir shop offers a variety of handicrafts and other local products. Nearby is a gharial breeding centre, which also has marsh muggers, as part of a conservation initiative. Here you can learn about the conservation measures being implemented for the long-term survival of the species. The Elephant Breeding Centre at Khorsor gives you information on domesticated elephants and the baby elephants born there.

Conservation issues
The aquatic life in these forests faces a serious threat from pollution of their ecosystems due to infrastructural developments on the banks of the river. Also, the Government of Nepal has proposed a new railway line, which threatens to cut across the heart of this National Park and put its wildlife in jeopardy.

The government has made a provision of giving back 30 to 50 per cent of the park revenue for community development in the buffer zone and this has significantly reduced poaching incidents in the park, alongside some great community conservation efforts by WWF and other organisations. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.
Barahi Jungle Lodge

Set on the northern banks of the Rapti River, its glorious location looks out over the tall golden grasslands and verdant forest and green hills of Chitwan National Park. Here lining its banks, along its 30 acres, are built a number of charming Tharu-inspired thatched villas from which to explore the grasslands and forests beyond.

The lodge is just a stone’s throw away from the glories of nature that this park has to offer. They can be explored alongside expert home-grown naturalists through small paddle boats, a comfortable vehicle or on elephant back, or for those with a taste for adrenalin, on foot. After all your exertions, relax on your villa’s private balcony with a beverage of your choice, unwind around the pool or at the Tiger’s Den bar, before indulging in the lodge’s food fest in its open-air dining room.

Activities / Special Features:
Go for breathtaking and adrenalin fuelled nature walks with the resident naturalist who will point out the variety of life, birds and other creatures you see along the way. Other ways to explore the park include canoe, jeep and elephant backed safaris. You may even get a chance to bathe one of the resident elephants on your return home.

Accommodation:
Spread over 30 acres, the lodge offers 35 boutique en-suite rooms, built as individual and two-in-one private villas or suites. The rooms open up to a balcony with a sit-out overlooking the forest and the river. Beautifully designed with a rustic blend of contemporary and traditional Nepali furnishings with indigenous skills, used wood, bamboo and elephant grass.

Food:
A large open plan dining room serves a range of Indian and Continental dishes cooked with fresh ingredients, sourced from neighbouring village gardens. Lively musical performances by Tharu artists can be enjoyed around a camp fire in the evenings.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Bharatpur (32 km)
Nearest park gate - Meghauli (across the river, 5 minutes away)

Children Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome.

A short bullock-cart ride from the Narayani River, the natural boundary between Chitwan National Park and the surrounding townships, takes you to the doors of Tharu Lodge. Emulating the longhouse style of local Tharu architecture and built from indigenous materials, the lodge overlooks idyllic Terai landscapes, ensuring that nothing but the sounds of the forest interrupt your stay.

Dine under a mango tree; then sway in a hammock in the afternoon breeze after a game drive. Try a bird watching tour - the lodge’s naturalists have recorded more than 300 species of birds in the surrounding habitats. You can get to observe and know the lodge’s twelve resident elephants as they wake, graze, bathe, play and feed, and engage with the mahouts’ daily work.

Exploring the villages by foot or bullock cart is the best way to experience rural Nepali life.

Activities / Special Features:
Set out on breathtaking and adrenalin fuelled nature walks with the resident naturalist who will point out the variety of wildlife, birds and other creatures along the way. Other ways to explore the park include canoe rides and jeep drives.

Accommodation:
12 en suite lodge rooms designed in a traditional manner await you. Interiors include bamboo blinds, cool decor and wooden furniture naturally finished and treated. 9 en suite safari tents are merged into the property grounds amongst the indigenous vegetation.

Food:

Driving through the verdant forests of any of the four sanctuaries of Coorg on a misty morning with the calls of the resident wildlife and birdlife in full song, is an experience unlike any other. The region is ornamented with grassy downs, paddy fields, sloping glades, waterfalls and deep ravines giving you endless and glorious surprises at every turn.

The Coorg region is also known by its local name Kodagu and the region spans about 4,100 square kilometres on the eastern slopes of the rich diversity of the Western Ghats of Karnataka. It is a hilly region with its highest peak, Tadiandamol, rising to 1,750 meters above sea level.

According to ancient Indian treatises this land was called Krodadesa, which later became Kodagu. It is derived from kod, which means give and avva meaning mother, in reference to River Cauvery that sustains life in this region.

The British started coffee cultivation on a large scale in the region and soon the local residents followed suit. Providing the largest contribution of coffee in the country, Coorg is renowned for its monsoon-fed coffee, shade-grown under giant rosewood, wild fig, and jackfruit trees that not only nurture but also infuse the bean with their unique aroma and flavour.

Coorg is also an important wildlife destination with its own distinct identity as a major travel attraction with its coffee and spice plantations and exotic flora and fauna. It also has its own unique long-standing social and cultural heritage. Its proximity to lesser known sanctuaries and National Parks like Nagarhole and the Wayanad Wildlife Sanctuary make it an exciting destination for nature and adventure junkies.

Fun things to see and do
There are plenty of fun activities and adventures to explore in this region. Check with your lodge or tour operator what they can arrange. Take a walk in the many plantations and learn about harvesting tea, coffee and spices; this is a patch of verdant green hills so you are sure to find plenty of birds and small creatures as you take a nature walk. Visit one of the nearby villages and learn about their unique lifestyle; and don’t forget to take a coracle ride down the river and enjoy the serenity this place has to offer. The Bylekuppe Tibetan settlement is also an interesting trip where you can visit monasteries and sample traditional Tibetan food. For those more inclined towards wildlife, safaris can be arranged to a number of Wildlife Sanctuaries and Nagarhole Tiger Reserve. Remember to take a packet of Coorg pepper home with you - it has been considered the best in the world.

What to look out for
Keep your eyes peeled for sightings of the elusive tiger or elephants trying to cross your path. Herds of deer and troops of langurs and bonnet macaques entertain you on your safari. Monkeys swinging from branches might come to have a closer look as you drive slowly through the forests and birds will chirp to catch your attention. The Indian pied hornbill and the Malabar giant squirrel are native to the region and you might be able to spot a few on nature walks.

Conservation issues
Proposed new roads connecting Kerala and Karnataka that carve through many of the sanctuaries are being contested and long standing environmental plans for protection of much of these crucial Western Ghat habitats are bitterly opposed by many communities. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

Bordered by the river Cauvery, Orange County is situated amidst a 300-acre working coffee and spice plantation, in a place often referred to as India’s Scotland. Famous for its coffee, rubber and spices, a stay here is equivalent to that of a colonial planter's lifestyle.

Imbibe its aromas infused with a rich cultural history and living traditions; and relax within its villas and lawns with old growth trees.

Cropping seasons play a large part in Coorg’s life ensuring a variety of harvest festivals. You can take a guided tour of the working coffee and spice plantation and try your hand at pruning or harvesting. Go bird watching with the resident naturalist or experience the rhythms of local life in the neighbouring Karadigodu village. Alternatively, ask to visit one of a number of National Parks and Sanctuaries in striking distance of the lodge, including Nagarhole and Bhramagiri.

Activities / Special Features:
Choose between a large communal pool and an exclusive infinity pool; go for a plantation or nature walk, bird watching, coracle ride, or a village visit by cycle. Trips can be arranged to Bylekuppe, the second largest Tibetan settlement outside Tibet, complete with a monastery, a Golden temple and a flea market.

Accommodation:
There are 55 luxurious accommodation options - Lily Pool Villas, Private Pool Villas, Lily Pool Bungalows and Lily Pool Cottages – spread out in clusters around this working coffee and spice plantation, which are inspired by ethnic Kodava architecture. Each villa has separate living rooms, spacious bedrooms with private courtyards, sit-out areas and private swimming pools.

Food:
Choose one of the three restaurants that offer varied cuisines from kebabs and grills to Indian and vegetarian delicacies. Private dinners can also be arranged at the infinity pool deck by the lake or by the poolside in your own Kodava-style Private Pool Villa. For a more intimate experience, ask for a romantic treetop dining experience. Alcohol is also served at the resort.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Corbett Tiger Reserve
Uttarakhand

Driving through the cathedral-like arches of ancient sal trees, the meadows of Dhikala, or watching fish-eating gharial crocodiles hunt mahseer at Champion's pool, all overlooked by the blue vistas of the Kumaon Hills, Corbett is, not surprisingly, one of the first parks that comes to mind when thinking of Indian wildernesses to visit.

Named after the famous hunter, naturalist and author Jim Corbett who played a key role in its establishment, Corbett is the oldest National Park in India and it was here, on April 1, 1973, that Project Tiger was launched.

The 1,300 square kilometre park is in the sub-Himalayan belt and the park’s altitude ranges from 400 metres to 1,600 metres. Corbett is often called the ‘land of roar, trumpet and song’, but it is best known for the numerous opportunities to watch large families of elephants. With a bird count of an astounding 550 species, it is an ideal place for avid bird watchers. It holds India’s densest tiger populations, over 200 individuals across its entire range.

The park is divided into five tourism zones namely Dhikala, Jhirna, Bijrani, Sonanadi and Domunda (Lohachaur).

The park is divided into three distinct geographical areas, with hilly areas of deciduous mixed forests, low lying grassland with ravines and vast dense forests of sal trees. The magnificent Ramganga River flows through the heart of the park bringing a continuous supply of water even in the hot summer months, attracting populations, over 200 individuals across its entire range.

What to look out for
Although Corbett has a significant tiger population, sightings are less common due to the dense habitat. Keep an eye open for the yellow-throated marten, Himalayan palm civet, the rare goral, herds of deer and elephants, leopards, sloth bear and jackals. You can also stop by the Ramganga River and see a number of gharials and muggers basking in the sun. Marvel at the prolific variety of birdlife, a raptor’s haven, with only the once rich vulture colonies having taken a beating over the last few years. Many say it’s a birding destination with tigers - rather than the other way round.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
There are excellent birding and wildlife trails in the buffer zone where you can spot plenty of common and some endemic birds especially in the mornings and early evenings, in fact often better wild experiences than in the park, which can get crowded with noisy day trippers. Trek to the Barati Rau waterfalls, an excellent place to spot reptiles and amphibians, orioles, flycatchers and great hornbills. For a touch of history, take a short drive up to Kaladhungi and visit Jim Corbett’s old house, which is now a museum dedicated to his work.

Conservation
Sadly tourism pressures are intense and continue to build often beyond the area’s carrying capacity thanks to a lack of political will and other development. Illegal poaching, fishing and wood felling continues. TOFTigers funded a Waste Warriors project and a Vulture Restoration project here monitoring nesting sites, raising awareness amongst villagers about the importance of vultures and discouraging use of illegal veterinary drugs. Any incidents of poor practice or rule breaking can be reported to us at admin@toftindia.org for action, ideally with photos. Consider helping with funding or support:
- Tiger Conservation Foundation
- Corbett Foundation
Aahana is a Sanskrit word meaning ‘the first rays of the rising sun’ and it does bathe the landscaped property in golden light every morning. On the fringes of the Corbett National Park, the plush eco-friendly resort is built around a large swimming pool.

The Victorian style architecture of the villa-like houses has 48 differing bedrooms—all with luxuriant interiors and cleverly designed to accommodate all types of groups, from a couple to a large family. This is as much a place for active families and large groups as it is a springboard for nature-based adventures.

The entire property has been landscaped with forest trees and lawns to provide an extended space to relax and enjoy the forest backdrop. Furthermore, its commitment to restoration, conservation and good environmental practice ensures your stay does not compromise the park.

Activities / Special Features:
You can choose to explore the jungle by an elephant safari or a jeep. Other activities include cycling, buggy ride, bullock cart ride, fishing, nature walks and yoga sessions with a trained teacher. A round of golf can also be arranged in Nainital, which is a 2-hour ride by car. Within the property, take advantage of the family sports room, go horseback riding, get an invigorating massage at the spa, or simply relax by the pool.

Accommodation:
There are 10 Victorian style residential blocks housing 48 differing yet plush styles of bedrooms and suites, all with attached bathrooms. All rooms have private balconies that overlook the forested Bijrani Zone of the park and only differ in their set up and interconnectedness.

Food:
The restaurant with an extended deck for barbecues and sky dining overlooks the swimming pool and offers an eclectic variety of Mediterranean, Oriental and Indian cuisines. Most of the produce is purchased from local farmers or grown in the organic gardens ensuring fresh daily ingredients. Dinner is often arranged next to a roaring bonfire.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year. The park has 5 zones, 2 of which remain open throughout the year.

Location:
Nearest Airport - Pantnagar (70 km)
Nearest railhead - Ramnagar (8 km)
Nearest park gate - Khara (6 km), Bijrani (9 km), Dhangari (17 km)

Vanghat

Accessible only with a scenic two-kilometre walk and short raft across the Ramganga River, this secluded and rustic lodge is set up for the serious nature enthusiast. Owner and conservationist, Sumantha Ghosh has put in a lot of effort to restore and preserve the natural hills and river around the lodge in the buffer of the Corbett Park.

The lodge positively invites wildlife including elephants to amble through the valley and its grounds, while smaller denizens of the forest like wild boar and barking deer are regular visitors here. The lodge's thick green cover makes for an excellent bird watching spot and a lovely place to spend early mornings and dusk by the river with binoculars.

Activities / Special Features:
Walking safaris accompanied by knowledgeable naturalists; birding treks to local villages in the hills; and catch-and-release mahseer angling.

Accommodation:
The property houses 4 hand-built mud cottages and 1 stone cottage built with minimum impact on the natural environment. They are constructed with locally sourced clay, savannah thatch, and wood and are inspired by the traditional Van Gujjar tribal homes.

Food:

Gir National Park
Gujarat

Rugged, scraggly, brown and dry, Gir is best known as the last bastion of the Asiatic lion. A beautiful hilly but harsh and thorny habitat in southern Gujarat, it is the last remnant of native landscape within the Saurashtra peninsula, yet often compared with the African bushveld. Old lion adversaries including leopards, hyenas, jackals and sloth bears live here too.

The lions that once ranged from Asia Minor to the northern plains of India almost came to the brink of extinction due to a combination of reduced habitat and mindless hunting. Today, roughly 526 of them can be found in and around Gir, the only individuals left on the subcontinent. The forest area and its lions were declared as ‘protected’ in the early 1900’s by the then Nawabs of the princely state of Junagadh. This initiative assisted in the conservation of the lions whose population had plummeted to only fifteen due to endless trophy hunting.

In the years after India’s independence, Prime Minister Nehru, spurred on by conservationists like Dr Salim Ali, formally declared Gir a Forest Reserve in 1965 and eventually a National Park in 1974 with a total area of 1,412 square kilometres.

While on your safari, don’t be surprised if you find tribesmen roaming this lion country on foot with their cattle without a care. These people are from the Maldhari tribe that translates to ‘owner of animals’. These colourful, nomadic people have lived alongside lions for millennia – with mutual respect.

What you can do inside the park
The best way to get a sense of Gir is to drive along Sasan and Kankai, Baval Chowk, Chodavadi and Tulsi Shyam zones. Seven rivers run through the park: the Hiran, Saraswati, Datardi, Shingoda, Machhundri, Ghodavadi and Raval. These are great places to spot marsh crocodiles and turtles along with aquatic birds. Most of the year you will find a variety of animals that come to quench their thirst on the banks.

What to look out for
It might be a desert, but Gir is home to a plethora of wildlife. Apart from the Asiatic lions, the hunters include leopards, sloth bears, striped hyenas and golden jackals. Herbivores are also aplenty – chital, nilgai, sambar, four-horned antelope, chinkara and wild boar. Among the smaller mammals, porcupine, hare and pangolin scurry beneath your feet. Gir has the highest population of marsh crocodiles among all Protected Areas in India. The plentiful avifauna population has more than 300 species of birds. There are six recorded species of vultures alone.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Make a trip to the crocodile hatchery and learn about these interesting creatures. For the spiritually inclined, the famous Somnath and Palitana Jain Temples are close by. People flock in droves to pay their respects to their deities here. Junagarh Fort is another attraction mainly for those interested in the history of the region. Diu is a beach town where you can go to relax and soak up some sun and sand.

Conservation
The park and the Girnar temple attract thousands of visitors every year putting pressure on the forest. There are also roads and a railway track that runs through Gir causing numerous road kills. Experts have urged that a new home be found for the lions and a rich forest in Madhya Pradesh, called Kuno Palpur has been identified for relocating a small pride. But this idea does not find favour with Gujarat as it feels that its monopoly on the lions will end. Hopefully, a resolution to the problem will be found to the advantage of the lions in the long term, with the ex-Gujarat Chief Minister now India’s Prime Minister. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

Kanha Tiger Reserve
Madhya Pradesh

Stopping your vehicle beside one of the large golden grass meadows with the sunbeams angled by the tall forest behind you; a morning mist and the unseen crack of horns from a pair of barasingha stags clashing and you might be reminded of Mowglis forests made famous by Rudyard Kipling.

These lowland forests are a mixture of great sal hardwood trees, once heavily felled for railways sleepers and other mixed species of forest. It is interspersed with grassy meadows - the habitat of spotted deer, the rare hard ground barasingha and ambush ground for the tiger. The higher forests are more tropical with bamboo growing in clusters within which gaur, wild pig, sloth bear and sambar deer make their homes. With all this prey, tigers are numerous too (over 100 at last count) and habituated to jeeps, ensuring memorable sightings.

The Reserve lies in the east of the Central Indian highlands of the ancient Satpura mountain range. Here, flat-topped hills support grassy meadows and the river Sulkum flows through the valley. The Banjaar and Halon valleys used to be hunting grounds of the British who would hunt the barasingha deer but their rapid decline in numbers forced the authorities to gazette Kanha as a Sanctuary in 1933. In 1955, a 250 square kilometre patch of land was declared the Kanha National Park. The Mukki Valley was added to the Protected Area in 1970 and then, thanks to Project Tiger, a vital part of the upper Halon of land was declared the Kanha National Park. The Mukki Valley was added to the Reserve in 1985 to make way for viable wilderness habitation.

There are four tourist zones here, each worth a visit - Kanha, Kish, Mukki and Sarhi.

What you can do inside the park
Inside the park only safaris on registered vehicles are allowed. Vehicles are restricted to certain zones but well managed movements and strict jeep numbers ensure good wildlife experiences. Though walking is not allowed the joy is in stopping your vehicle and listening to the endless bird sounds and alarm calls of the jungle. Picturesque picnic and rest stops are allocated within the park.

What to look out for
Well known individual tigers are sought out commonly including many tigresses with cubs. However, leopards, sloth bears and exciting packs of hungry wild dogs or dholes also abound in these forests. Prey species like the chital and sambar are found grazing in herds. The barasingha or swamp deer (hard ground swamp deer) is found only in Kanha and barely 1,200 of them survive in the wild. Look out for the dusky monkey, golden jackal, Bengal fox, smooth-coated otter, honey badger, small Indian civet, Indian grey mongoose, spotted chevrotain and pangolin. There are also 175 varieties of birds in Kanha including the purple heron, shikra and white-eyed buzzard. The Indian ghost tree (kullu) is hard to miss with its ghostly white trunks.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Visit nearby villages to see their farming practices and their weekly markets, which are fascinating. Ask your lodge about birding, cycling or walking trails nearby and along the Banjaar River. There are nature trails in the buffer zone near the Khatia and Mukki Gates. Cycles are available for hire from the Forest Department counters near the gates. Night safaris en route to Aaramtola at Mukki Gate can also be arranged within buffer areas, good for sighting nocturnal creatures. Visit the herbal trail in Chhapri near Khatia and learn about the medicinal plants grown there.

Conservation
Kanha faces similar pressures to most protected areas, including developmental and infrastructure projects, grazing, illegal poaching, woodcutting, forest product extraction and bush meat off-take. It also has both historic and present issues with compensation and support for many of the Baiga and Gond village communities relocated over the years to make way for viable wilderness habitation.

However, recent research highlights the economic value of the park at ₹ 1,650 crores (£176 million per year) ensuring support for this well managed park continues. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

Getting Around the Park:
Jeeps called ‘gypsies’ that are registered with the authorities and carry 4 to 6 people are available and the only vehicles allowed inside. Book through your operator, lodge or at the gate. Cost from ₹ 2,000 per game drive.

By Air:
Jabalpur to Kisli (160 km), Jabalpur to Mukki (200 km), Nagpur (270 km). Transport can be hired to drive to the park.

By Road:
Kanha is a five to six hour drive from Jabalpur or Nagpur. Mandla is 100 km from Mukki and 60 km from Kisli gate.

PARK INFORMATION

How to book
Your lodge or tour operator can book a safari for you, or you can book online.

Chitvan Jungle Lodge

Spread over fourteen verdant green acres, Chitvan Jungle Lodge is a comfortable safari lodge that blends into its surrounding forest and farmlands and has been interwoven empathetically with its Gond tribal village neighbours. A small water body provides an advantageous viewpoint for observing the area’s wealth of wildlife.

Each sumptuous wood-bedecked suite is designed with an earth element in mind - water, earth and sky - with the decor reflecting the theme.

Cycle through villages and farmlands or take a birding walk with a resident naturalist along the Banjaar River. There are over a hundred bird species and 40 butterfly species to spot within the grounds itself. You can also plant a sapling that will be maintained by the resort, take a bullock cart ride through local villages or try your hand at some organic farming - there’s never a dull moment at Chitvan.

Activities / Special Features:
Besides the standard jungle drives, the lodge arranges tribal dances, bullock cart rides, birding and nature walks and local market visits. A short cycling trip to the countryside, an Indian cooking demonstration and learning organic farming at the lodge’s farms are also popular activities enjoyed by guests of all ages.

Accommodation:
Choose from the 10 Jal cottages or 4 Prithvi suites, which have a big saja tree in the centre of the block and comfortable and spacious rooms. The 4 Akash suites are located next to the organic farms and give you a captivating view of the Maikal Hills. The Mahasagar Suite is a large 2-bedroom suite with a living room and 4 private balconies to enjoy panoramic views.

Food:
From grains and vegetables to milk products, all ingredients served here are organic and mostly harvested at the lodge or in neighbouring farms. A variety of Indian and Continental dishes are cooked to suit your preferences. You can try an Indian cooking demonstration, interact with the chef and learn about some of the delicacies from the kitchen. Having a sundowner at the bar is a perfect way to end your day here.

Opening Times:
Closed from 15th June till 30th September.

Location:
Nearest Airport - Raipur (220 km), Jabalpur (220 km), Nagpur (300 km)
Nearest Railhead - Gondia (135 km), Jabalpur (200 km)
Nearest park gate - Mukki Gate (4 km)

Children Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. The Jungle Knowledge Educational Tour is specially designed for youngsters and teaches them the importance of forests and wildlife. It entails a gentle walk to the Banjaar River with a naturalist, spotting the footprints of different creatures, both big and small.

Kipling Camp was established by a well-known family of conservationists in the 1980’s with a strong wildlife and community focus. Today, tiger conservationist Belinda Wright and her mother continue to run this family-owned lodge in the traditional style with its houseguest ambience and commitment to the community that helped lay the foundation for the success of Kanha over the years.

Once an open farmland, it is now a sun-speckled woodland where chattering birds, spotted deer and even tigers do not fear to tread, using the Camp’s waterhole as part of their domain. Dining is mostly al fresco in an open dining area where many well-known personalities and field researchers have regaled wildlife tales over a large whisky. It’s also home to Tara, the elephant made famous by her sojourns across India with the late Mark Shand.

Opening Times:
Closed from mid-May to mid-October.

Location:
Nearest airport - Jabalpur (160 km)
Nearest railhead - Jabalpur (160 km), Nagpur (260 km)
Nearest park gate - Kisli Gate (3 km)

Children Policy:
Children of all ages are particularly welcome - it is a wonderful place for them to learn about nature and have their first wildlife experience. They are taken on nature walks, to see results from the wildlife camera traps and to meet and learn about Tara the elephant.

Activities / Special Features:
Apart from daily jungle safaris, you can go for a birding or nature walk, bathe Tara the elephant in the river, explore local villages and farms, visit the local school and tribal artists, or have a massage. At night there are film shows and tribal dances. Day trips can be organised to visit the forts near Mandla and the gorges near Seoni.

Accommodation:
6 cottages with 15 rooms are scattered among the trees, all with en suite bathrooms and rain showers. 3 of the rooms are air-conditioned. There is also a private cottage with a sitting room and patio overlooking the wildlife waterhole. Heaters and hot water bottles are provided in the winter and coolers or air-conditioners in the summer.

Food:
A choice of Indian and Continental cuisines is offered here. Picnic breakfasts are served in the National Park during the morning safari. Lunch and dinner are served back at the camp under the mahua tree, on the Bamboo House patio, or under the stars. Alcohol is served under license.
Located in 110 acres of reclaimed and restored jungle, Singinawa is appropriately named in Sherpa language meaning ‘Protectors of the Sacred Forest’. This beautiful expanse of regenerated, natural habitat and the lodge is now under the new protection of its proprietor, Tulika Kedia, whose management and naturalist team care for all guests’ needs with unwavering commitment.

Guest accommodation is in charming stone and slate cottages, nestled in their own area of jungle on either side of the main lodge, offering privacy and oneness with nature. Passing wildlife and avian species are observed regularly, with the antics of troops of langur being a source of great amusement.

Tulika’s patronage of indigenous art and support of Gondi artists has culminated in the induction of The Kanha Museum of Life and Art situated within the lodge and is curated by noted art historian, Dr Alka Pande.

Activities / Special Features:
Jeep safaris into the park, treks and nature walks in the buffer forest are popular. Go into the interior of the forest on a 20 km track on all terrain Firefox bicycles to Jaldidand Baiga village, or plan a day trip to Phen Wildlife Sanctuary. If you go for a visit to a nearby village, don’t forget to stop by the village market, cattle fair and meet the tribal potters at Baihar. Take a guided tour of The Kanha Museum of Life and Art at the lodge. The lodge offers visitors the added opportunity to not only accompany trained naturalists on a tour of the local forests but also soak in the indigenous culture through an aesthetic experience.

Accommodation:
The lodge offers 12 tastefully designed cottages. All of them have a large bedroom, private veranda, en suite bathrooms with double vanities and rain showers, proper fireplaces, air conditioning and a mini bar. Newly introduced, The Perch is a secluded bungalow that offers 4 avifauna-themed rooms. It has its own private dining and living room; kitchen; library; a personal butler service; and a lotus pond that beautifies the surrounding garden.

Food:
Singinawa’s chefs offer extensive menus of Indian, Nepalese, Continental and pan Asian cuisines. The adjoining home farm grows and supplies organic rice, wheat and pulses directly to the kitchen, while vegetables, herbs and spices are plucked afresh daily from their organic herb and spice garden.

The Watering Hole, with its open treetop level terrace, offers guests an idyllic venue to unwind over a cup of coffee, or partake of an elaborate range of cocktails.

Opening Times:
Singinawa is closed from end of June to end of September each year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Jabalpur (155 km), Nagpur (275 km)
Nearest railhead - Jabalpur (155 km), Nagpur (275 km)
Nearest park gate - Mukki (12 km), Khatta (36 km)

Children Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. They get the chance to learn traditional Indian games with school children from nearby villages. They can also learn pugmark identification, plaster cast making techniques and how to read jungle signs with the resident naturalist. The lodge also arranges for baby sitters, special cots and food for infants and children on request.

Kanha Earth Lodge is tucked into 16 acres of reforested lands, adjoining the buffer forests of Kanha. Lying close to a small quintessential village community and rich farmlands, it makes for a rich experiential stay. Away from the hurly burly of the Kanha-Kidi Gate, the lodge’s natural landscape attracts a multitude of mammals and colorful birds feasting on the old growth trees, all of which can be enjoyed in the company of top quality naturalists. Even so, it is only 30 minutes from the park gate, ensuring that it is close enough for easy access to the forest.

The comfortable bungalow style and award winning buildings, nestled within this forest paradise, are inspired by Gond tribal architecture, while recycled, waste wood, terracotta tiles and local stone has been used for construction and furniture design. The lodge has a nature library-cum-presentation room and an eco shop that contributes 25% of its proceeds towards conservation activities.

Activities / Special Features:
If you’re feeling adventurous, explore the outdoors through a jeep safari with the lodge naturalists, elephant safari, birding walk, nature trail or cycling. Guests can sight the rare hard ground barasingha found only in Kanha’s large grasslands, in addition to tigers, leopards, sloth bears, lesser cats and over 250 bird species. For a cultural experience, visit a local Gond tribal home and participate in a crafts workshop with Gond woodcarvers and local potters, or a painting workshop with Gond painters. You could also visit the Friday weekly market to shop for local produce and souvenirs. For the guests who want to relax, there is an infinity pool, which is set between Mahua trees and its infinity edges merge into Kanha’s forests.

Accommodation:
The lodge offers 12 air-conditioned luxury bungalows with en suite bathrooms, dressing room and large open verandas with forest views. The bungalows are designed to merge into the landscape yet provide all the comforts for a luxurious stay like 24-hour power back up, 24-hour hot-water facility, complimentary organic toiletries and bathroom essentials and a tea and coffee pantry offering a choice of select brews. The lodge refrains from directing jungles to create landscapes and has its resident birds and mammals that have been happily coexisting since the foundation, thus providing guests with a true wilderness experience.

Food:
A multi-cuisine dining hall serves Indian and continental cuisine cooked with fresh produce sourced from our kitchen gardens and the neighboring villages. Moreover, there is a facility for outdoor barbeques and bush dinners, where one can dine under the stars.

Opening Times:
Open from 1st October to 30th June.

Location:
Nearest airport - Jabalpur (176 km), Nagpur (270 km), Raipur (350 km)
Nearest railhead - Jabalpur (176 km), Nagpur (270 km), Gondia (200 km)
Nearest park gate - Khadia (15 km)

Banjaar Tola is a plush jungle safari lodge situated on the banks of the Banjaar River. With its own unique identity celebrating the Bastar and Dogra art from nearby Chhattisgarh, it’s really a masterpiece in the contemporary use of canvas through all the living quarters, fine dining and glamorous leisure areas.

With two elegant camps of nine suites, each with its own intimate tented sitting area, the luxurious en suite tents have been designed in a post-modern style with textiles designed with rich block-printed Madhya Pradesh cottons and silks. Raw timber furniture, canvas wardrobes, leather detailing and handcrafted furniture made from fallen trees and driftwood give you a thoroughly upmarket camping feel.

Activities / Special Features:
Gond and Baiga tribes showcase their dances by the bonfire in the evening; personalised cooking lessons; bird watching at the Banjaar River; cycling through the village.

Accommodation:
Accommodation is in one of 18 tented suites set on raised platforms, with large bathrooms. Wide glass doors open onto private decks overlooking the river, offering panoramic views of the wilderness beyond.

Food:
The food is inspired by Chhattisgarh cuisine but can cater for all tastes. Dinner may be served in the forest lit by lanterns and accompanied by traditional dancing or on your own balcony. Fresh salads from the lodge gardens are also served.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Location:
- Nearest airport - Nagpur (244 km), Jabalpur (195 km)
- Nearest railhead - Nagpur (244 km), Jabalpur (193 km)
- Nearest park gate - Mukki (2 km)

Children’s Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. Screening of wildlife movies; indoor games organised by naturalists; treasure hunt; cooking demonstration; guided nature walks; and community visits are some of the activities they can participate in. “I am a Naturalist” programme for budding naturalists is a 3-5 day module that introduces kids to the finer art of tracking animals using field signs, alarm calls and pug marks. At the end of the programme they take home a certificate.

Flame of the Forest Safari Lodge

Flame of the Forest is the dream of naturalist Karan Modi and his Swiss wife Isabelle Heini. It is a small, comfortable open aired lodge nestled on the banks of the Banjar River over twenty acres of land most of which has been left untouched to return to nature. Panoramic views over the slow river and the Kanha forests beyond greet every visitor and ensure the sounds of the tiger forests within.

Each of the four cottages is built in the vernacular style of Central India. Take a sundowner or dine under thatch, alfresco or even in the river when the waters are low! The Yoga hall overlooking the river is the perfect place to root yourself into the wilderness.

Activities / Special Features:
Wildlife library; Yoga classes; shop with products made by local women; machaan; game drives with a trained naturalist; walks to the village and in the buffer zone; visit to the weekly market; cycling tours.

Accommodation:
There are 4 individual cottages facing the river. Every cottage has an en suite bathroom, a private courtyard, veranda deck, and a machaan. To combat the summer heat, every room is equipped with an air conditioner and a generator back-up.

Food:
The lodge provides fresh food from their own vegetable garden cooked in the traditional style of Central India.

Opening Times:
Closed from 1st July to 30th September.

Kaziranga National Park
Assam

As you amble across the tall grasslands on elephant back and emerge into an opening, you’re likely to run into some heavily armoured, prehistoric looking one-horned rhinoceros, nonchalantly grazing before you barely looking up to give you the time of day. Do consider the sight that belies the extraordinary story behind their survival, here on the banks of the mighty Brahmaputra River.

This 430 square kilometres of swamps, sandy riverine islands and waves of tall elephant grass which exist over a flat and broad plain, interspersed with forests of moist tropical trees, floods dramatically every year and is key to its semi aquatic existence. A World Heritage Site, the park today hosts two-thirds of the world’s greater one-horned rhinoceroses, according to the latest census in March 2015 a total of 2,401 - a remarkable feat considering the species was on the verge of extinction, with only 12 left in 1903. In 1908, Kaziranga was designated a Reserve Forest with pioneering protection efforts underway, before being given official park status in 1974.

Within these watery borders remain herds of now endangered wild buffalo, Asian elephant, swamp deer, capped langur and Asia’s only ape - the hoolock gibbon, which lives in the canopies of the higher bordering forests of Karbi Anglong. It’s also one of India densest tiger habitats with recent estimations of over 80 individuals - but you will be lucky to spot them. Keep binoculars at the ready for this is rare Bengal florican country and a host of wetland and migrant bird species, specifically in the winter months can be enjoyed on elephant back, from a watchtower, by jeep, or in some parts, on foot with an experienced guide.

The park has three tourism zones - Kohora, Bagora and Agartoli.
TOFTigers MEMBERS – LODGES & RESORTS

Diphlu River Lodge

Set amongst verdant farmland, patches of bird-rich forest and slow meandering streams, the ambience of the River Lodge makes it a retreat in the true sense of the word. The luxurious, but rustic and eco-friendly lodge was built to adapt to the existing foliage and terrain. The cottages are built on stilts and their thatch-covered roofs are supported by thick bamboo pillars. The lodge is separated from the Kaziranga National Park by the river Diphlu, giving the cottages a close view of the wildlife-stocked jungle beyond it. The spacious main building, called Machan, has a library, a restaurant, sitting areas and a large veranda with gorgeous views of the park beyond the river.

Activities / Special Features:
Dolphin Boat Safari (October to end June) to view Gangetic dolphins; visit to a 11th century Durga temple in the hills and shopping in Tezpur; open-jeep safaris and nature walks accompanied by resident naturalist; elephant safaris (need to be booked a day in advance); village visits to Mising, Bodo and Karbi, all unique in their dialect, traditions and attire; tribal dances around a bonfire with barbeque; tea plantation visit. (Note: tea manufacture stops mid-December to mid-March).

Accommodation:
12 straw-thatched cottages, raised on stilts above the ground, each sleeping two, are available. Made of bamboo and thatch, they beautifully blend in with the stunning surroundings. The cottages are air-conditioned and have been tastefully furnished with Assamese and Naga artefacts.

Food:
The cuisine served here is a hard to define blend of Indian, Assamese and Continental made with fresh ingredients that rarely disappoint. The homemade marmalade is highly recommended. The lodge also organically grows its own rice, mustard and some vegetables. The bar serves up some good cocktails.

Keoladeo Ghana National Park

Rajasthan

This man-made swamp is one of the world’s best-known and yet most-threatened birding havens. Bharatpur, as it was earlier known, was founded by Maharaja Suraj Mal in 1733 when he ordered the building of the Ajan Dam that flooded the natural depression behind it. The park derives its present name from a Shiva temple here and the word ‘ghana’ that was added to its name means ‘dense’ in Hindi.

Occupying an area of roughly 29 square kilometres, the park features man-made wetlands and microhabitats like low-lying lands completely submerged in water, grasslands and dense tree growth. Lord Curzon and Lord Kitchener inaugurated the first duck shoot here in 1902. The party of 17 killed 540 birds on that one day. In 1956 the area was declared a Bird Sanctuary but hunting was only stopped in 1964. It was declared a Ramsar site in 1981, a National Park in 1982 and a World Heritage Site in 1985.

The park is home to 375 bird species and the number grows exponentially when the migratory birds arrive. The park was one of the favoured nesting grounds for the Siberian cranes during their yearly migration. Sadly their numbers have all but died over the years due to poaching and wars on their migratory route.

What you can do inside the park
Cycles, rickshaws and boats are available for excursions into the park. Longer walks and rides are also available.

What to look out for
Keoladeo receives thousands of waterfowl including cotton teal, tufted duck, comb duck, Indian shag, Asian open-billed stork, Oriental ibis and the sarus crane. The park is also a breeding ground for the painted stork, herons and cormorants. You can also see non-feathered friends including deer, wild boar, jackals and the rarely spotted Asian and Indian civets.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Visit the famous Keoladeo temple or enjoy a rickshaw ride to Python Point where you are likely to see pythons. An interesting walk is along the Brijendra Bund trail that extends six kilometres from the Keoladeo temple to Kadam Kunj. The many bunds, on which you will see babul trees growing, are excellent places to spot birds.

Conservation
The park is often starved of water from the Ajan Dam so that it can be diverted to neighbouring farmers and this has a real effect on the sheer bird numbers visiting the park when it happens. There is no buffer zone to restrict human intervention from the villages located around it. This has led to serious problems with encroachment and cattle grazing. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

The Birder’s Inn

The Birder’s Inn is run by Tirath Singh, an avid bird watcher and naturalist. Located a mere stone’s throw from the entrance to the park, the lodge offers 24 spacious rooms that overlook lush gardens. The lodge employs some of the best local naturalists; people who were actually born inside the park. Share in their experiences and insights to make your visit truly worthwhile. Go for a ride on cycle-rickshaws and bicycles or a boat safari. Excursions to nearby Deeg palace, Fatehpur Sikri and Dholpur Chambal River are also arranged.

Looking to view some of India’s most impressive herds of elephants? Then, you’re in the right place. This park is part of a contiguous 5,500 square kilometre landscape (ideal habitat for these pachyderms) of the Nilgiri Biosphere reserve, bordering three States in the Western Ghats - Kerala, Karnataka and Tamil Nadu.

Named after the river Nagarhole that snakes through its rich tropical forests, it is a combination of two Kannada terms, Nagar meaning cobra and hole meaning river. Together with Bandipur National Park, Mudumalai and other Protected Areas, this region constitutes the largest contiguous forest covering in Asia. It is home to the largest congregation of Asiatic elephants in the world and the Indian bison or gaur. It also has one of the greatest densities of tigers (fifteen tigers per 100 square kilometres) and the largest population on the continent with 406 individuals at the last census, many having been studied for years by Wildlife Conservation Society (WCS) researchers. But don’t just look for the mega fauna; look into the treetops for arboreal giant squirrels, flying snakes, or one of the 300 bird species from Malabar pied hornbills to rusty-tailed fly catchers.

The Lingayat kings of Kodagu ruled Nagarhole until the British colonial administration established hegemony in the 1850s. In 1955, a 285 square kilometre area was gazetted as the Nagarhole Game Sanctuary. The same was extended in 1974 with some reserved forests from the Mysore district being added to bring the total area to the present 644 square kilometres. It was accorded the status of a National Park in 1974.

What you can do inside the park
Game drives in converted open top government-owned vehicles are the only form of wildlife viewing, so ensure you book early and enlist a good guide to get the most from a visit. The Mule-hole River and the banks of the Kabini River are all excellent spots to look out for elephants in summer. A coracle or a boat ride down the Kabini River usually results in good sightings of large and small mammals that have come to the banks for a drink and the birds that flock around the shores. A tour can also be arranged to one of the tribal villages within the reserve to experience the life of the Kurubas.

What to look out for
These forests consist of three major predators - tiger, leopard and dhole, all three co-existing in high densities thanks to high densities of prey like spotted, mouse and barking deer. Other animals that have made their habitat in Nagarhole are Indian bison, porcupines, jackals, hyenas, and sloth bears. Several species of venomous snakes, a cornucopia of reptiles including a ying frog and raptors like the changeable hawk eagle, rufous-bellied hawk eagle and grey-headed fish eagle are also found here. More recently there have been sightings of a black panther.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Nature walking trail on the shores of Kabini river take you a step closer to things you might have missed in a hurry. Small critters, colourful flowers and birds are just some of the things you can spot here. Still water rafting and rappelling can be arranged by private lodges for those looking for adventures. Visit the Irrupu Falls or, on your way home, the historic fort of Seringapatnam or the city of Mysore.

Conservation
Well protected and one of India’s best studied Protected Areas, threats to the park come from illegal cutting of sandalwood and teak trees and poor planning and development. Forest fires and seasonal droughts leading to water shortage have caused many wild animals to migrate to other greener spaces. There are also many cases of human-wildlife conflict due to raids by wild animals and elephants on nearby villages along with the consequent retaliation by villagers. Investment in elephant proof trenches and solar fencing around the park helps but is not fool proof for these intelligent creatures. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org. Consider support for:
- Wildlife First
- Wildlife Conservation Society
Orange County, Kabini

Cleverly inspired in design by the Kadu Kuruba Hadis, the local tribal village homestead, this picturesque wilderness resort is bordered on two sides by the Kabini reservoir. It overlooks the sweeping vista of one of India’s finest tiger and elephant reserves, Nagarhole on the opposite bank.

A sundowner in the cavernous palm-roofed open-air lounges or dinner in one of the two restaurants overlooking this glorious scene is a “must do” as the sun goes down across the lake. Alternatively take to a lantern lit boat for a truly romantic dinner for two.

With so many activities to choose from it is difficult to find the time for the infinity pool, the night walks, boat and coracle safaris, bike and bullock cart trips - besides the escorted game drives into the park itself - so you may just have to come again next year.

Orange County Resorts and Hotels Ltd

Activities / Special Features:
On the boat safari or coracle ride on the Kabini River, spot as many residents of the forest as you can. Get up close and personal with Kaveri, the resident elephant and lend a hand with bathing and feeding her. The nature trail with the in-house naturalist takes you along the banks of the Kabini and then through the scrub and fields along the village roads. You can also explore nature around the resort at night.

Accommodation:
The resort architecture has a tribal Kadu Kuruba leitmotif and the dwellings subtly incorporate the colours and textures of the landscape in every detail. The 8 Pool Huts have a large living and dining area, a palatial bedroom, a bathroom with a courtyard and your own personal swimming arena. The 29 Jacuzzi Huts offer you spacious living spaces and comfortable bedrooms, with your very own personal open-to-sky Jacuzzi.

Food:
The 2 restaurants at Kabini lay out a platter of the choicest international and regional cuisine overlooking the River Kabini. You can also request a romantic boat-dining experience, feasting while silently floating on the waters of the Kabini. Alcoholic is also served at the resort.

Opening Times: Open all through the year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Mysore (90 km), Kozhikode (210 km)
Nearest railhead - Mysore (90km), Kozhikode (180 km)
Nearest park gate - Bandipur Forest Check Post (11 km)

Children Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. The resort also has an Activity Centre to keep children occupied.

Red Earth Kabini

Red Earth Kabini’s ten acres is set on a peninsula, bordered by the picturesque backwaters of the Kabini Dam, which flows on into the mighty Nagarhole and Bandipur reserves nearby. Red earth mud walls are the predominant colour and texture of the comfortable cottages together with thatch roofs and bamboo verandas, laid out around waterholes.

The fact that three suites are deliberately kept for honeymooners suggests that this is a place to indulge your senses. With marbled hot tubs in every cottage and the ‘wetland’ bar in the middle of an island, you would be right to consider it as a romantic getaway – with wildlife as an added extra.

Activities / Special Features:
Jungle safaris; bird watching with in-house naturalist; musical and theatrical performances; fishing trips in coracles along the backwater of Kabini; cycling; Tibetan monastery visits.

Accommodation:
20 cottages are set in 2 clusters of 10 cottages around a small lake, 3 of these are Honeymoon cottages and 1 cottage is designed for the physically challenged. All cottages are air-conditioned with their own open-to-the-sky hot tubs.

Food:
Food here is prepared using organic vegetables sourced from the local villages. A colonial style bar makes for a great place to relax in the evenings.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Mysore (64 km), Bangalore (201 km)
Nearest railhead - Mysore (60 km), Bangalore (204 km)
Nearest park gate - Dommanekatte (6 km)

Children's Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. They can watch wildlife movies or documentaries, be entertained by a magic show in the evening, go cycling, or play some indoor games.

NAGARHOLE TIGER RESERVE, KARNATAKA

Harishvara Venkat
Maharashtra

This small park often gets overlooked for its more famous and larger counterparts, but true nature enthusiasts know its importance. Covering an area of 152 square kilometres, nestled within the Vidarbha mountain range, it is often referred to as the ‘green oasis’ of the region.

Nagzira got its name from the snake or nag temple here and zira, which means a perennial source of water referring to the stream from a hill in Pongezara.

Gond kings once ruled these forests. In 1970, this area was declared a Wildlife Sanctuary and in 2012, it was merged with another National Park. The sanctuary is now part of the proposed Nagzira-Navegaon Tiger Reserve. The forests of Gondia and Bhandara form an important corridor with links to other Tiger Reserves in the region.

What you can do inside the park

Jungle safaris are the most popular way to spend your time here. Jeeps are available on hire and you can even take your own vehicle inside. Stop at observation towers and spend some quality time watching wildlife. Currently, there are five watch cabins and five watchtowers.

What to look out for

As you drive through thick vegetation with a view of mountains in the backdrop, keep an eye out for tigers, leopards, mouse deer, spotted hyenas and dhole. The endangered Chinese pangolins are nocturnal in habit and are rarely sighted. The treetops are dotted with birds such as barbets, woodpeckers, hornbills, flycatchers and herons. The catchment area supports several varieties of freshwater fish and attract migratory water birds.

Fun things to see and do outside the park

Go for nature walks in the buffer zone or bird watching around water bodies. Visit the museum at the Nagzira tourist complex, Chorkhamara village, or the Navegaon Wildlife Sanctuary. You can also try fishing in dams near Navegaon and Nagzira where you can observe a variety of birds while waiting for a catch.

Conservation

A proposal to construct a thermal power plant just nine kilometres away from the park boundary puts the wildlife at risk of losing pristine habitat, as well as being exposed to conflict with humans. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

PARK INFORMATION

How to Book:
Safaris can be booked through resorts and tour operators, or online.

Park Timings:
Winter : Morning : 06:00 am - 11:00 am
Evening : 02:30 pm - 05:30 pm
Summer : Morning: 05:00 am - 10:00 am
Evening: 03:30 pm - 07:00 pm
The park is closed from 1st July until 30th September.

Getting Around the Park:
Jeeps are available on hire, and you can even take in your own vehicle, but hiring a guide is compulsory. The Pitezhari Gate is the main point from where permits to enter the Sanctuary can be taken. Charges start from ₹ 3,000 for Indian Nationals and ₹ 3,500 for Foreign Nationals. Each jeep accommodates 6 people per vehicle and includes vehicle fee, guide charge and entry fee.

Entry Fees:
₹ 50 for Indian Nationals
₹ 100 for Foreign Nationals

Guide Fee: ₹ 300

Vehicle Entry Charges: ₹ 150

By Air: Nagpur (120 km). Transport can be hired on arrival.

By Rail / Road: There are 3 railway stations to the park: Gondia (45 km), Bhandara (75 km) and Nagpur (122 km). Cabs and buses are available from these stations for the park.
Get away from the bustle of overcrowded parks and visit this quiet gem for a more personal interaction with the wilderness in Assam. Spanning an area of 344 square kilometres, it shares its Northern boundary with the Pakke Tiger Reserve of Arunachal Pradesh, a patchwork of lush green forests and wetlands with the clear waters of the Jia Bhoroli River adding to the beautiful views.

Jia Bhoroli was once famous for its golden mahseer population and was a popular angling destination, but it has now been banned allowing the fish population to flourish. Mural, goonch, Indian trout and chocolate mahseer are other varieties of fish found here. Apart from elephants and tigers, Nameri also has a sizeable population of avifauna, including the rare and endangered white-winged wood duck.

At Nameri there are no jeep safaris. Instead, visitors can walk the nature trail accompanied by an armed guard. Watchtowers overlooking a patch of small pools are good spots to stop and take in the surroundings. You are likely to spot some green imperial pigeons here. Another way to explore the park and view its water birds is by rafting the mild rapids of the Jia Bhoroli River. It is more a pleasure ride than an adventurous tumble.

What you can do inside the park
River rafting on the Jia Bhoroli river is a fourteen-kilometre ride that takes about three hours to cover and traverses over mild rapids. Go for a moderate trek inside the park with an armed Forest Department guide and get a closer look at the nooks and crannies of the park.

What to look out for
Orchids are found in abundance in the region, adding some colourful flair between the bamboo stalks and along the open grassland. The forests are also rich in epiphytes, lianas, and clump-forming bamboo. Nameri also has a sizeable elephant population and is also home to a host of other animals including the tiger, leopard, sambar, dhole, muntjac, sloth bear, Himalayan black bear and the Indian giant squirrel. With over 350 species of birds in the region, birders can revel in rare sightings such as the seasonal visitor the ibisbill, the highly endangered white-winged wood duck and the near-threatened ferruginous duck.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
The historic town of Tezpur is just 35 kilometres away. Historical ruins from the 8th and 9th centuries dot the surrounding areas of the city. The ruins of Bamuni Hills are the most famous. For those who haven’t had their fill of wildlife, there are three other nature reserves within a two-hour drive from Nameri—Kaziranga National Park, Orang National Park and Pakke Tiger Reserve.

Conservation
Many landless communities had migrated into these forest areas in search of secured land and livelihoods during the colonial period. Unlike the local tribal communities who were hunter-gatherers and foragers, these settlers depended on agriculture. As farm lands grew further into forest lands, so did the man-animal conflict and it continues to be a problem today. Efforts to provide alternative livelihood skills programmes for the forest villagers are supported by the lodges here to reduce their dependency on forest land. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.
Namoti Eco Camp

Namoti Eco Camp is owned and managed by an NGO called Assam (Bhorelli) Angling and Conservation Association and is located in the buffer zone of the Namoti National Park. It offers comfortable yet good value living for keen naturalists and birdwatchers trying to spot an extraordinary variety of birds within these verdant grounds. In fact over 350 species have been recorded right here!

The camp is spread over three acres and has a choice of rooms, safari tents, or a shared dormitory. Visit the camp’s souvenir shop ‘Keteki’, that sells locally made products and also plan a visit to the local handicraft centre to ensure you make the most of this community treasure.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year. The National Park is closed from June to October but rafting on the river is open all year round depending on the condition of the river and discretion of the Range Officer.

Location:
Nearest airport - Guwahati (220 km), Tezpur (25 km)
Nearest railhead - Tezpur (37km)
Nearest park gate - Jia Bhoreli River (1 km)

Activities / Special Features:
River rafting; trek in the park with the assistance of an armed forest department guide.

Accommodation:
The camp has 9 tents, 3 cottages, and a dormitory that accommodates around 20 people. Locally sourced materials, such as bamboo, have been used for the construction.

Food:
The eatery here has a varied menu. Food served ranges from local cuisine to Chinese dishes. Both vegetarian and non-vegetarian items are available. Tandoori roti and chicken is a big hit with tourists.

Children’s Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. They can visit the pygmy hog centre behind the camp or go for easy and safe float trips on the Jia Bhoreli River.

As you glide quietly down the powering Chambal River, you are mesmerised by the deep ravines that envelope you on both sides, formed by continuous soil erosion of monsoonal floods over countless millennia. They form a maze of entwining cliffs of ancient mud and dry scrub forest – home to various species of mammals, reptiles and birds.

National Chambal Sanctuary is named after the river, one of India's cleanest and longest rivers and covers an area of 1,235 square kilometres. It was declared a Protected Area in 1979 in an effort to protect the forest and river ecosystem, as well as the largest wild population of the endangered gharial crocodile. The Sanctuary is also listed as an important birding area and is a proposed Ramsar Site.

Ancient Indian texts refer to the Chambal as the Charmanyavati - originating from the blood of thousands of cows sacrificed by the Aryan King Rantideva.

The river is a lifeline for both the people and the forests that border it. Its waters originate from the Singur Chouri peak in the Vindhya range in Madhya Pradesh and meander their way through Rajasthan, entering Uttar Pradesh and finally draining into the Yamuna to become part of the Gangetic plains. The Sanctuary is home to the critically endangered gharial crocodile, the red-crowned roof turtle and the very endangered Ganges river dolphin.

There are public vehicle entry points to Chambal Sanctuary at Pinahat, Nandagon Ghat, Sahson and Bhareh.

What you can do inside the park
The best opportunities for sighting and photography of gharial and dolphins can be had by hiring a boat with a driver and guide, available at several points along the river. Most boatmen are exceptionally skilled at cutting the boat engines and manoeuvring as close to the birds and animals as possible without disturbing them. Walking trails in the ravines and along the river offer opportunities for close observation of the wide variety of plants and animals in the Sanctuary.

What to look out for
These forests and their freshwater ecosystems are best known for the wide variety of aquatic and bird life found here. They are the only known place on earth for nesting for the threatened Indian skimmers! Migratory birds from Siberia form part of its rich avian fauna. Vulnerable bird species found here include the sarus crane, Pallas's fish eagle and Indian courser. Chambal supports eight of the 26 rare turtle species found in India, including Indian narrow-headed soft shell turtle, three-striped roof turtle and crowned river turtle. Other wildlife found here are the critically endangered Ganges dolphins, smooth coated otters, striped hyenas, Indian wolves and the muggers.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Visitors may explore Ater Fort, a beautiful but dilapidated landmark and historical site. Take a camel safari along the riverbanks through villages and up to the Fort for a more interesting journey. The villages provide an interesting insight into rural India and one can still find a potter at his wheel making earthenware and shops selling hand-woven quilts. The Sarus Crane Conservation Reserve is also nearby. It is a widespread wetland area, interspersed by cultivated fields, where large numbers of the sarus cranes breed.

Conservation
Parts of the sanctuary are threatened by extensive illegal sand mining, which is endangering the fragile flowing waters critical for gharial breeding. In 2010, the Minister for Environment and Forests formed the National Tri-State Chambal Sanctuary Management and Coordination Committee to ensure ways to protect gharials and their habitat. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org and consider helping with funding or support:

- The Chambal Conservation Foundation
Ram Pratap Singh and his wife Anu have turned their run down inheritance, Mela Kothi, into a lovingly restored homely lodge nestled in 35 sprawling acres of scenic woodlands. Originally built as a mela or cattle fair camp in the late 1890s, the house and its stables now welcome you in style and comfort to the little known wilderness and cultural heart of the Chambal region.

Combining the Rajput style of the old and the comforts of modern living, it has a range of bedroom suites and cottages with courtyards, verandas and even a library. You come together over food in the stable's dining room or under the stars in a courtyard setting within the original homestead. It’s very much ‘your home away from home’.

Activities / Special Features:
Accompanied by naturalists, guests may explore the Chambal Valley by boat, camel, jeep, bicycle and on foot. Village visits; guided visits to the Bateshwar Temples and animal fair; and cooking demonstrations are other activities offered.

Accommodation:
The lodge has 13 rooms, 1 large heritage room, 2 suites, a suite and a twin-bed room in the Bougan Serai, and 8 cottages in the grounds surrounding the main house. Rooms have private sit-outs overlooking the woodland and fields.

Food:

Nilgiris, Cherambadi
Mudumalai, Tamil Nadu

You can lose yourself in the lush green forests of the Nilgiris and return to experience it all over again. Never a dull moment, this green world either rings with langur alarm calls or quivers with the passing of an elephant herd.

Covering a tract of over 5,000 square kilometers, the Nilgiri Biosphere Reserve is India’s first Biosphere Reserve with extensive forests, a rich repository of flora and fauna and a source of great rivers, including the Kaveri. Part of the biosphere, Cherambadi is about 40 km from Mudumalai Wildlife Sanctuary in Tamil Nadu. It is known for its tea and coffee plantations of major groups such as Harrisons Malayalam, Tata, etc. While ambling through these estates, you can watch out for wild elephants, leopards and other smaller mammals that frequent here. The area acts as an elephant corridor between the three states.

Once upon a time, Mudumalai Wildlife Sanctuary, now also a declared Tiger Reserve was made up of old forest blocks, used for big game shooting. During World War II, the forest was used as a training camp for soldiers to be sent to Burma. Today, it is one of the safest refuges for the Asian Elephant with over 600 pachyderms found here - the largest concentration of elephants in India. Mudumalai literally means “old hills” and is also home to the gaur, leopard, wild dogs, tiger, chital, sambar and a host of birds.

What to look out for
Make sure to visit between December and June for the best sightings. Elephants and gaurs are found in large numbers, so look out for herds crossing over to or from Bandipur. If you’re lucky enough, you might witness a pack of dholes (wild dogs) chasing deer for dinner while chital, sambar, gaur, sloth bear, wild pig pop up unexpectedly in shadows or sunshine. The loud drumming of the white-bellied woodpecker with its striking crimson chest is captivating while snakes and lizards remain well hidden in the scrub. Mudumalai is a versatile canvas with grasslands, semi-evergreen, moist and dry deciduous and dry thorn forests adding to its many shades.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Visitors can explore Ooty, a tranquil hill station, which offers something for everybody. For adventure lovers, there is trekking, angling, horse riding and mountain biking, while leisure seekers can stay at a lush green tea plantation or enjoy a quiet homestay or at the Reception Centre at Theppakadu. Station yourself at a machan or salt lick overlooking a waterhole, to sight wildlife unobserved. Visiting the gushing Moyar Falls may be worthwhile too.

Conservation
Due to excessive cattle grazing, there has been an extensive growth of invasive species such as lantana that hinders the natural regeneration process of the forests. Wildlife habitats stand to be significantly impacted due to the construction activities of the proposed India-based Neutrino Observatory at Singara, Masinagudi. The wildlife corridor is likely to be disrupted by the five-year work plan and its repercussions in terms of human footprint, vehicular pollution and new support infrastructure. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

Wentworth Estate

Spread across 3,000 acres, Wentworth Estate of Harrisons Malayalam Ltd., is a tea, coffee and black pepper plantation surrounded by the Nilgiris forest in Tamil Nadu. On a lucky day visitors can see wild animals such as elephants, tigers, bears, deer and leopards that cross the tea gardens. The vast property provides ample opportunity for bird watching, nature walks and tea garden walks. The souvenir shop displays and markets local art and craft produced by the tribals of the Nilgiris.

Wentworth provides accommodation in its two tea bungalows, which represent British style and architecture. They have been made with locally sourced material and decorated with local handicrafts.

Accommodation:
Bird watching; nature walk; tea factory visit; coffee plantation visit; market visit; tribal village visit; training in tea plucking and tea processing. Visitors can also have a picnic at the beautiful Cholady riverside or embark on an adventurous jeep safari through the rough terrain.

Accommodation:
The estate offers two tea bungalows – the first having three rooms and the second, two rooms. Each spacious room has a view of the green scenery outside and a fireplace.

Food:
Wentworth offers meals cooked fresh from local produce. Guests can enjoy delicious North and South Indian, and Continental, vegetarian and non-vegetarian food. A barbecue with campfire adds to the ambience.

Lush emerald green forests, deep ravines, open plateaus and cascading waterfalls welcome you into their folds. Captivated one forgets that, as with most Indian wildlife reserves, Panna too was originally a hunting reserve owned by the Maharaja of Panna. It was granted National Park status in 1981.

The boundary of the 540 square kilometre park is marked by the broad and rocky River Ken which flows through the Vindhya range in Madhya Pradesh towards the Ganges, a river full of life from crocodiles that bask on its sandy banks to white-necked storks and kingfishers that fish in its waters.

It’s also a park of epic and well-charted conservation struggles. Diamond and sandstone mining was gravely affecting the park and by the 1990’s it was in deep trouble. Experts turned around its fortunes by the turn of century, but by 2009 tigers were again poached to extinction. Recent relocation efforts have been remarkably successful and tiger numbers grow year on year with over 30 individual adults today, many accustomed to visitors. However leopards still abound, alongside a good population of sambar deer, nilgai and spotted deer to feed this success story.

According to legends, the Pandavas of the epic Mahabharaata spent a part of their exile in these forests. The Pandava Falls near the park have a beautiful lake and shrines dedicated to these gods in the surrounding cliffs.

Entry gates are located at Madla and Hinauta.
Ken River Lodge

Spread over 50 acres of woodland, the lodge is built on the banks of the wide crocodile infested Ken river and is home to Shyamendra Singh, grandson of the Maharaja of Nagod.

It offers six village style air-conditioned huts and six cottages with a living room, kitchenette and an open deck. Apart from the game drives in the day, go for the night safari at Jhinna or for birding and boating trips with resident naturalists. Fresh produce is sourced from the neighbouring villages and the kitchen garden of the lodge.

Pashangarh - Taj Safaris

Pashangarh is built at the top of a small hill in 200 acres of wilderness adjoining Panna Tiger Reserve with far reaching views of the tiger forest and a large waterhole that has been host to numerous big cats and antelopes.

Large rough stone cottages with handcrafted contemporary furniture and silk and linen furnishings draw their inspiration from the dry-packed stone houses of the region. The guest areas celebrate Haveli design with a spacious central courtyard. A strong motif throughout the lodge is that of the crocodile, which inhabits the Ken River. Here you can learn about the rich biodiversity of Central India with the in-house naturalists on jungle safaris and private nature walks.

Activities / Special Features:
A boat ride on the Ken River; cycling through the village; yoga lessons; trips to Khajuraho temple and Kalinjar fort; and visit an active diamond mine. A naturalist can also help you set up a camera trap before turning in for the night so you can see what wildlife visited you as you slept.

Accommodation:
The lodge features 12 stone cottages, contemporary yet mindful of their Indian heritage. Each has a large en suite bathroom and discreet veranda with a comfortable day bed.

Food:
The lodge offers the best of Bundelkhand-style cuisine. The menu may often feature delicacies straight from the lodge’s own garden.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year, but the park itself is only open to the public from 15th October to 30th June.

Location:
Nearest airport - Khajuraho (50 km)
Nearest railhead - Khajuraho (50 km)
Nearest park gate - Madla (1 km)

Children Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome.
The evidence is undeniable, the feeling palpable, as you drive down the dusty dirt tracks, that around every corner a drama will unfold, a glimpse caught, a movement spotted. The sun-dappled forest floor is alive with spotted deer. Vast herds also gather on the shorelines of the park’s reservoir, offering a smorgasbord of food for Pench’s hungry carnivores that include leopards, wild dogs and tigers (thought to be close to 65). The remarkably unshy tigress, Collarwali, who has nurtured 20 cubs in five litters and whose mother was featured in the BBC’s Spy in the Jungle series is a treat to spot. It was here that Rudyard Kipling chose to base his story of the wolf boy Mowgli. However, it wasn’t until 1992 that Pench was included under the umbrella of Project Tiger. Today, the Reserve covers districts of Madhya Pradesh and Maharashtra.

The park is predominantly a teak forest, but other hardwoods and flowering trees support a rich and diverse array of birdlife too.

Local villagers, mostly Gonds, will tell you about their local god, Mansingh Deo. He was a legendary figure who was believed to have supernatural healing powers and would ride into the local bazaar on his tiger. There are two temples dedicated to him, the Chhota Mansingh and Bada Mansingh temples which are worth a visit.

The park has three tourism zones: Touria, Karmajhiri and Jhamtara.

What you can do inside the park
Seeking a tiger doggedly can cause you to miss the whine of the cicada, the sight of the common butterfly or the shrill call of a crested serpent eagle. It’s India’s densest population of prey species, nearly 25,000 of them, including spotted deer, wild pig and sambar deer. In April when the Pench River dries out, the animals use dohs or perennial springs as waterholes, or crowd the shoreline and tender grasses of a receding reservoir. It acts as an artificial wetland where you can see hordes of water birds sitting on what were the tree stumps of flooded woodlands.

What to look out for
Tiger is the main cat species but commonly seen wildlife includes chital, sambar, nilgai, wild boar and jackal. Other wild animals found are leopard, sloth bear, wild dog, porcupine, jungle cat, fox, striped hyena, herds of gaur, four-horned chowingsha and barking deer. There are more than 170 species of birds including several migratory ones. Some of them are crimson-breasted barbet, red-vented bulbul, racket-tailed drongo and magpie robin with lesser whistling teal, pintails, river terns and northern shovellers on or near water bodies.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
You could visit the Kandadev, Bagdev and Kumbhababa temples that attract thousands of pilgrims every year. They give you an insight into the lives of the local people. Ramtek, about an hour away, also has temples that are over 600 years old. The old British cantonment, Kemtee and the Kalidas memorial are other points you may want to visit at Ramtek.

Conservation
Pench is a well managed park but threats include the National Highways carriageway cutting corridors to Kanha. An irrigation colony within the core area has been finally handed back to the forest authorities. This ruling by the Bombay High Court came twelve years after the first order in 2002 that said that no human settlements are permissible in the Tiger Reserve. Poaching, overgrazing and sprawling tourism present ongoing concerns. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org. By Rail / Road: Seoni (30 km) and Nagpur (70 km) are the nearest towns and railheads from where you may hire transportation.
Located on the edge of the Pench Tiger Reserve, Baghvan is aptly named after India’s iconic Royal Bengal Tiger. This property set the standards for the four Taj Safaris lodges. Magnificent suites are hidden in thick forests along narrow natural paths beside a dry nullah or streambed close to the park - its pebbled and fine-sanded bed being the favoured territorial trail of many a carnivore and their prey.

A cheeky mix of old and new, ethnic and safari furnishings, textures, colours, cushions and wall hangings cover the open lounge, dining room and library. This leads to another alfresco dining room and further on to a small plunge pool to while away your midday hours.

Each interconnecting suite has its own private elevated machaan, or rooftop platform that converts to an outdoor bedroom if you prefer to sleep under the stars.

Opening Times:
Closed from 1st July until 30th September. The park itself is only open to the public from 15th October to 30th June.

Location:
Nearest airport - Nagpur (90 km) and Jabalpur (192 km)

Children’s Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. Screening of wildlife movies, indoor games organised by naturalists, treasure hunt, cooking demonstration, guided nature walks, and community visits are some of the activities they can participate in. The “I am a Naturalist” programme for budding naturalists is a 3-5 day module that introduces kids to the finer art of tracking animals using field signs, alarm calls and pug marks. At the end of the programme they take home a certificate.

Activities / Special Features:
Watch the jungle buzz with activity on one of the daily game drives, a foot safari in the nullah or on an exciting night safari under the moonlit sky. For those who want to relax, you can watch birds from the pool deck or steal an outdoor siesta with birdsong in the background. Visitors can also enjoy a leisurely bicycle trip or a visit to the potter’s village at Baghvan Pench. Though the park is closed on Wednesday afternoons, guests at Baghvan now have an option of a safari in the afternoon through prior booking.

Accommodation:
The lodge offers 12 private suites that have a distinctive contemporary bungalow feel. Each suite comprises two inter-linked buildings, spacious bathrooms and a rooftop machaan for lazy sleepouts. Delicate Parsi tiles, woven hyacinth furniture, high ceilings, deep welcoming sofas and giant ebony chests grace the elegant guest areas.

Food:
Meals can include a varied range of cuisines. The kitchen garden has an array of fresh green vegetables and herbs. Pick the ones you like and have the chef add them to your next meal. Breakfast and lunche are served on a sweeping shaded deck surrounding the beautiful swimming pool and overlooking the nullah.
Though the main accommodation of the lodge is set within thirteen acres of lush bamboo foliage, shade giving trees and sprawling lawns, a further 38 acres next door is home to herds of spotted deer, nilgai, rare wild dog movements and the cacophony of groups of langur monkeys who do not respect any such boundaries.

Choose from a range of comfortable accommodation styles be it the lodge’s suites, rooms or large safari tented rooms. Enjoy the many activities that the lodge offers, from a dip in the swimming pool to enjoying the spa, horse riding and bird watching with an in-house naturalist around the lodge grounds. UNDER PROCESS: Tathastu Resorts, Pench Tree Lodge
Rajaji National Park
Uttarakhand

Watch a family of elephants here as they go about their daily routine and try to pick out their distinct personalities and understand social hierarchies. Rajaji has the largest population of elephants in Uttarakhand (over 500) giving you excellent opportunities to study the pachyderms.

Rajaji is the first staging ground for migratory birds once they cross over the Himalayas into the Indian subcontinent, so you are bound to meet many feathered visitors in the winter months.

Rajaji is spread over 820 square kilometres and was formed in 1983 by merging three wildlife sanctuaries - Chilla, Motichur and Rajaji. The Ganges cuts through these forests and is home to a wide variety of fish like trout, mahseer and chilwa. The park was named after C. Rajagopalachari who was a prominent leader during the Indian freedom struggle from the British.

Jungle safaris are offered at two locations currently, Chilla and Motichur Ranges. Visitors can enter from one of the seven gates at Ramgarh, Mohand, Ranipur, Motichur, Chilla, Kunao and Laldhang.

What you can do inside the park
Take a game drive during the winter months of October to February when the migratory birds descend. March and April offer the best weather for outdoor treks and overnight camping. The summer months of May through June might be very hot but it is also the best time for spotting wildlife. The park is closed during the rains, but you can still visit the buffer zone.

What to look out for
Elephants are the main draw, but leopard, mountain goat or gharial and the elusive Himalayan black bear are also sighted. It is also a haven for birds.

What can you do outside the park
Rafting on the Ganges is a thrilling experience. Situated in Dehradun and declared as a Bird Sanctuary, the wetlands at Assan Barrage is a birder's paradise. The best places for birding are on the 26-kilometre forest drive from Chilla and along the 40-kilometre Phanduwala - Motichur trail.

Conservation
Overgrazing by settlements around the park has depleted the food for herbivores resulting in elephants raiding crops and creating serious conflicts with locals. The Chilla Canal has interrupted elephant corridors and the army’s ammunition dump at Raiwalla has further dented the elephant passage. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

Available amongst the rich farmlands and distant Shivalik hills, the resort is located in the elephant corridor of nearby and lesser known Rajaji Tiger Reserve. The resort has sixteen rooms - exemplar and each having a novel and distinct appeal. Each room has a sweeping view of the proud towering hills and the verdant forests. All the rooms have hardwood floors and are designed on a wildlife theme. Eight of the rooms open out onto a private balcony with an inviting splash pool to revitalise your senses.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Dehradun (35 km)
Nearest railhead - Rishikesh (18 km)
Nearest park gate - Chilla

Children’s Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. There is a separate play area for kids.

Ranthambhore Tiger Reserve
Rajasthan

Striking images of tigers lying on ancient tombs or fortress walls or lapping up water from its picturesque lakes draws thousands of visitors to Ranthambhore each year. It is brimming with tigers too, over 30 individuals plus numerous cubs at the last count.

Ranthambhore National Park is part of the much larger 1,333 square kilometres Ranthambhore Tiger Reserve. It derives its name from the hilltop fortress within its boundaries and has been the destination of many well-known documentaries over the years. The fort overlooks the lakes and is a picturesque spot where many birds and animals can be found, making you want to linger just a little bit longer, to watch one of the tiger royalties who reside here.

The ancient mountain ranges of the Aravalli and Vindhya meet here creating a mix of flat tablelands and steep cliffs. These forests were, until 1949, the private hunting reserve of the Maharaja of Jaipur. This is where the Queen of England and her husband went on a tiger hunt in the late 1940’s.

An inspired Park Director, Fateh Singh Rathore, pioneered the relocation of nine villages from the core area to lands outside the park boundaries between 1973 and 1975. This proved a resounding success as the dependence on the forest resources was reduced. The wildlife, relatively free from human interference, could roam the forests during the day and tiger sightings increased dramatically. Many of his ideas have helped shape the park you see today, flourishing with wildlife.

What you can do inside the park
The majestic Ranthambhore Fort, built in the 10th century, stands 700 feet above the surrounding plains. Inside the fort, there are three red Karauli stone temples devoted to Ganesh, Shiva and Ramlala Ji. It is a scenic structure and often tigers can be spotted roaming the ruins. Visit one of the three shallow man made lakes within the park boundaries - Padam Talao, Raj Bagh and Milak Talao - around which most of Ranthambhore’s wildlife is concentrated. Padam Talao is the largest of the many lakes located in the park. The red sandstone Jogi Mahal can be found at the edge of the lake. The lodge was used by the late Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to view wildlife.

What to look out for
Depending on the month you travel, you will see a variety of birds and animals. Winter sees plenty of birds that are migrating, while summer has large mammals roaming the forests in search of water. The varied topography provides habitats for animals like the jackal, mongoose, sloth bear, leopard, lesser cats, caracal and of course the tiger. Spend time near the lakes to spot waders and waterfowl including snipes, grebes, godwits, sandpipers, geese and ducks.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Areas around Ranthambhore have developed catering to tourists who flock to the park in large numbers. The village and stop over at the Daskari Kendra, which is a women’s co-operative NGO producing block printing, local textile and handicraft work. Local bird watching tours around Mansarovar and Surwal Lakes result in plenty of sightings. Visit Amil Deh on the river Banas, renowned for spotting striped hyenas, foxes and jackals.

Conservation
The settlements around the park are mainly agriculturist dependent upon the natural resources of the park. As the villages expand into the park boundaries, raiding by wild animals and livestock kills have increased. The main cause of deterioration is grazing of livestock in the buffer zone as well as in some areas of the core zone. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org. Support the TOFTigers Village Wildlife Guardian programme through Tigerwatch.

For those who demand the sumptuous home comforts, Oberoi Vanyavilas is just your adobe. Spread over twenty acres of landscaped gardens, it has a number of palatial tents with finely embroidered canopies and private walled gardens, a large waterhole and lounge areas fit for a Maharaja.

Order a sundowner while watching wildlife from the observation tower overlooking the Aravalli Hills and the resort’s specially created waterhole where over 75 species of colourful birds can be spotted.

For those interested in the arts, the resort arranges demonstrations by local wildlife painters and traditional local artisans that practice the Moghia arts and crafts. You can also try your hand at the art of block printing and see demonstrations of traditional patchwork and Kantha embroidery.

In the winter, the main hall of the restaurant is lit by an open wood fireplace, while folk musicians lend ambience to the courtyard.

Activities / Special Features:
There are plenty of attractions around the resort apart from the jungle safaris. The Ranthambhore Fort is a popular attraction. Bird watchers frequent the lake of Surwal as it attracts a lot of winter migratory birds. You can also shop at local NGO centres like Dhonk, Dastakar and Ranthambhore School of Arts in the nearby market.

Accommodation:
25 luxury tents are located in clusters that afford privacy, but also enable families or small groups to stay close to each other. Designed to reflect the majestic caravans that crossed the deserts carrying noblemen during the times of the Raj, the tents are within easy walking distance of the pool, restaurant and spa. The inner canopy is decorated with gold woven tiger print, rugs lie on polished teak floorboards, while the four-poster, canopy bed is the prize of the room.

Owned by Dr. Goverdhan Singh, son of legendary Park Director, Fateh Singh Rathore and his charming wife, Usha, Khem Villas is a very comfortable and family-run stay in 25 acres of restored farmlands. It is now restored to a verdant garden of native trees, grasslands and water bodies and is home to jackals, jungle cats, hyenas, desert fox and even an odd crocodile or two! This vast natural habitat is also a bird watcher’s paradise.

Moreover, guests can detox and unwind at the Age Veda Spa, which provides meditative silence and body therapies. The various room types have been crafted using locally sourced materials and positioned to offer you privacy. Fine, and only vegetarian, dining is enjoyed in the bungalow-style building. Apart from the various daily activities, some visionary conservation and health projects have been set up by Goverdhan.

Activities / Special Features:
Grab your binoculars and make the best of your game drive in the park or a quiet nature and bird walk with the lodge’s expert naturalist. For those seeking history and local culture, visit the fort or walk through the nearby village for some interesting sights. Make sure to try the river safari on the Chambal River and a nature walk through the 80 acres of restored land, which has been turned into a natural jungle over 25 years. Visitors can view herds of black buck, the most magnificent gazelle of the desert landscape, just an hour’s drive from Ranthambhore, and get involved in the lodge’s conservation projects.

Accommodation:
The lodge offers three types of accommodation – cottages, rooms and traditional Shikar tents. Each cottage includes a spacious bedroom, bathroom with an al fresco shower and courtyard. Made of bamboo and wood, each tent is comfortable, minimalistic and with modern facilities, lending a rustic charm.

Food:
All the food at Khem Villas is vegetarian, but can be adapted to individual tastes. A variety of Indian, Western and Oriental cuisine is available to guests. The lodge also runs an organic farm and dairy that supplies food for the lodge’s guests. The lodge also has a well-stocked bar you can take advantage of after a long day filled with activities.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Jaipur (180km), Agra (276 km)
Nearest railhead - Sawai Madhopur (12 km), Bundi (131 km), Kota (150 km)
Nearest park gate - Misadhara

Children’s Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. Nature walks, trips to see a bio-gas plant, dairy and green house visits, and educational tour explaining ecological practices in growing our own food are some of the activities planned for kids.

With a remarkably bold vision, Gaj Singh has built the unmistakable Nahargarh to resemble a sixteenth century fort complex of the Indo-Islamic era, within which sits a traditional Rajput hunting lodge, complete with a myriad of arches, sumptuous domes, formal Mughal gardens, courtyards and even painted frescos, all nestled with the background of the picturesque Aravalli Hills. It’s an extraordinary authentic copy from the 21st century.

Interiors, fittings and furnishings don’t disappoint either. Its spacious rooms reflect traditional Rajasthani Rajput design fit for today’s travelling maharajahs. The atrium comes alive in the evenings with traditional musical performances as this palace recreates the royal nostalgia of old.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Jaipur (156 km)
Nearest railhead - Sawai Madhopur (7 km)
Nearest park gate - (1.5 km)

Children’s Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome.

Activities / Special Features:
Jungle safaris; village visits; wildlife film screenings.

Accommodation:
80 authentically designed and spacious rooms all with large en suite bathrooms that lose nothing of their royal ambience.

Food:
A multi-cuisine restaurant serves a buffet comprising a variety of global cuisines and barbeques. The bar serves an assortment of alcoholic drinks.
Satpura Tiger Reserve
Madhya Pradesh

After you get on a ferry on the Tawa dam, your gateway to this park, you will encounter rugged hills and steep mountains with sandstone peaks, narrow water filled gorges, deep ravines, dense sal and teak forests, as well as quiet coves and bays on which crocodiles bask and spotted deer drink. This is real explorers’ country.

With real vision, Satpura is set up differently to most other Tiger Reserves in India, allowing you a far more immersive nature experience within its bounds including nature walks, trekking (and even overnight camping), canoing and elephant back safaris that do more than ferry you back and forth on a ‘tiger show’. In fact it’s deliberately not set up to show you tigers, even though its population is doing better than ever. This is for the keen nature lover who appreciates quality guiding and off the beaten track access to all of nature - big and small.

Satpura is part of India’s Central Highlands, getting its name from the Satpura hill ranges and it’s within striking distance of the plateau on which the old English Raj town of Pachmarhi, the summer capital of the Central Provinces till 1947 is built. These cool Highlands were being rapidly deforested of precious teak in the 1860s, and support was raised to declare the area a ‘reserve’, indeed the first in the world to be formally declared a Protected Area. Along with the adjoining Bori and Pachmarhi Sanctuaries, the Satpura Tiger Reserve is a 1,427 square kilometre area of unique Central Indian Highland ecosystem.

Satpura has only one tourism zone where only twelve vehicles are allowed in the morning and evening.

What you can do inside the park
Choose to go on a nice nature walk one day, game drive further the next morning and canoing in bays and coves that afternoon, take a bike trail or ride an elephant for a couple of hours the next. Few places offer that kind of choice. Some lodges offer trekking and overnight camping dates that can get you to parts of the park inaccessible to vehicles too. Stop and enjoy the Denwa gorge scenery and if you get a chance, and if you can get permission, ask to see the ancient cave painting in these hills.

What to look out for
Wildlife spotting here is excellent with a real chance of seeing wild dog packs and sloth bear, both uncommon in other parks. There are healthy leopard populations with prey species like sambar, chital, nilgai, and even some pale-coloured gaur. Also look out for foxes, porcupines, flying squirrels at dusk and the colourful Indian Giant squirrel in the trees. Mugger crocodiles bask in the coves of the Tawa Lake. There is a large number of bird species to be found here including water birds like pairs of nesting skimmers and good river and little terns, as well as hornbills and lots of peacocks.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Take a bike and explore the countryside, or enjoy a night safari through the buffer zone, where you could see many of the park’s nocturnal creatures including jungle cats, common palm civet, Indian hare, small Indian mongoose and leopards. Arrange these with your lodge. Birding by the lake’s shore with a naturalist is fun too, or if you have a full day drive to the old hill town and army cantonment of Pachmarhi for a glimpse of the colonial past. If time is short visit local villages either on bike or by vehicle.

Conservation
Located within the Satpura Tiger Reserve, Pachmarhi is a popular hill station that receives over 65,000 visitors a year putting a lot of stress on the natural resources here. Existing villages that still live within the boundaries of the reserve also make use of the forest resources including wood extraction, grazing and jungle produce. Illegal fishing in the Tawa reservoir is also a major concern. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

PARK INFORMATION

How to Book:
Safaris can be booked through your lodge or tour operators.

Park Timings:
The Park is open for visitors for c.4.5 hours after sunrise and c.2.5 hours in the afternoon before sunset. Please check park opening times with the gate as they vary slightly between summer and winter months depending on sunrise and sunset. Pachmarhi is open all year. Wednesday afternoon the park is closed.

Getting Around the Park:
You can hire a jeep or go on a walking trail inside the core area, but in both cases you need to be accompanied by a registered forest guide. Elephant safaris and kayaking or canoeing are also good options to explore the buffer areas, with night safaris available too.

Entry Fees:
Satpura has several activities with several components to the fees, so it is best to find out the current pricing from your tour operator or lodge depending on the activities you want to try.

By Air: Bhopal (135 km). Transport can be hired to drive to the park.

By Rail / Road: The nearest town is Hoshangabad and the nearest railhead is Piparia (55 km). Transport can be hired to drive to the park.
Denwa Backwater Escape is the latest enterprise in an expanding portfolio of Pugdundee’s stylish lodges and overlooks the mesmerising backwaters of a dam built on Denwa River. Its glorious location takes in the panoramic views of the surrounding grasslands and the rolling Pachmarhi hills. Built on ten acres of forested land, it lies across the river from the park. A short hop by boat then a jeep or an elephant gets you deeper into the forests.

The lodge has been built using local materials like stone and baked tiles, but the design is contemporary rather than rustic. The interiors of the rooms are done up in style with leather safari furniture using local craftsmanship. The main buildings and the swimming pool use handcrafted furniture made from recycled wood and old railway sleepers, ensuring use of local artisan skills and minimum impact on this stunning landscape.

Activities / Special Features:
Activities offered include nature walks; walking and jeep safaris; kayaking; cycling; night safaris; and for the adventurous even camping options in the park. Naturally, the lodge provides trained naturalists to accompany their guests on all these activities.

Accommodation:
Choose one of 8 luxuriant river-view cottages or 2 river-view tree houses, all en suite. The cottages have a large terrace where you can sleep out under a glorious panoply of stars. Staff will arrange for mosquito netting on request. All come with intercom facility, air conditioning and power back up.

Food:
The dining hall overlooks the tranquil Denwa River and serves a variety of Indian, Continental and local cuisines cooked with fresh produce sourced from neighbouring villages.
Forsyth’s Lodge

Forsyth’s Lodge’s founders pioneered Satpura’s rise to prominence, helping to catalyse its more innovative approach to nature tourism. This stylish lodge set in a once barren tract of 44 acres of farmland is now a restored forest with grassy meadows, alive again with birds and wildlife, reflecting their original passion.

Now under new management the lodge continues to focus on in-depth wildlife and wilderness experiences without losing its local touch. Our highly experienced team of naturalists will captivate you with both enthusiasm and knowledge. Enjoy sun downers on the rooftop of the communal building, a contemporary rammed-earth structure, with views of the distant Satpura Hills and overlooking the village inspired cottages built out of the same cob materials, ensuring an aesthetic blending with nature and its local environment, without compromising on comfort in any way.

Activities / Special Features:
The lodge arranges for jeep safaris by day and night; elephant or walking safaris escorted by a naturalist; and canoeing steered by a boatman who will point out the treasures of the forests. The lodge arranges a 4-day trip to Pachmarhi. The Forsyth trail is another option, which is a gentle 2-day hike.

Accommodation:
Forsyth’s consists of 12 independent en suite cottages built in an arc around the lodge building and a swimming pool, each made to offer unique and private vantage points into the lodge’s carefully restored landscape.

Food:
The Forsyth Bar, situated on an elevated platform, gives you great views and serves delectable Indian and Continental meals. You can sample traditional fare at lunchtime cooked by local women in a village kitchen created at the lodge. A candlelit dinner can also be arranged under a mature tree near a roaring campfire.

Opening Times:
Closed from 1st July until 15th October.

Location:
Nearest airport - Bhopal (180 km)
Nearest railhead - Piparia (38 km), Itarsi (62 km)
Nearest park gate - Madai (13 km)

Children Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. A Junior Rangers Course is available for children. Spread over three days with each session lasting 30 minutes, this course introduces them to the basic tools of jungle craft such as ecology, learning how to identify different animal prints and trees, using field guides and making nature notes and sketches.

Sundarbans Tiger Reserve
West Bengal

The Sundarbans is one of the most unique wildlife destinations you will ever visit. Its ecosystem is a nursery, protector, restorer and engine of many of land, sea and air's most crucial natural processes. For anyone who loves nature, this treasure trove is a 'must see'.

Home to 78 species of mangroves - the highest diversity in the world - these aquatic and often tidal based forests are the only ones where tigers are found. The estuarine crocodile, water monitor lizard, the Gangetic and Irrawaddy dolphins, Olive Ridley turtle and king cobra make their home here too, close to the floating villages that inhabit the vast cluster of low lying estuaries and islands.

The only way to see this place is by boat, either on short outings or longer cruises with an excellent guide. Keep your eyes peeled to see the creatures that inhabit this wet and wondrous world including smooth-coated otters, Irrawaddy dolphins, porpoises and sharks in the waters and crabs, reptiles and mudskippers on the shorelines! However, to spy a tiger is like winning the tombola, even though there are believed to be 90 here - somewhere!

In an age of climate change, this forest is destined to be one of West Bengal's most vital defences against rising sea levels that has the capability to stop the displacement of millions of humans.

Measuring about 10,000 square kilometres and straddling both India and Bangladesh, it is the largest active delta in the world formed by the rivers Meghna, Ganga and Brahmaputra. Known for its unique mangrove forests, parts of the forest are designated as UNESCO World Heritage Sites in recognition of their high biodiversity.

What you can do inside the park
Boats trips are arranged by your lodge. The Sudhanyakhali forest camp is where visitors have often spotted tigers and a host of others animals. Visit the Mangrove Interpretation Centre at Sajnekhali to learn about the biodiversity found here. It also shows the cultural heritage of the village folk in the region. A watchtower helps you view the scenery - at Dohanki where you can do a canopy walk, at Neti Dhopani in the core area and at Burir Dabri watchtower where you can do a caged mangrove walk near the Bangladesh border.

What to look out for
Sharks and dolphins hunt in these waterways benefitting from the protection afforded to the tiger habitat, as do nearly 50 species of mammals and over 350 species of birds. Mudskippers, crabs and snakes are plentiful. A host of waders such as whimbrels, sandpipers and plovers can be found in the shallows searching for invertebrates and other morsels. These forests are home to many rare and globally threatened wildlife species such as saltwater crocodiles, Bengal tigers, Olive Ridley turtles, river terrapin and king cobra.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Visit a fishing village to understand the harsh realities of life here. Near Sajnekhali is a turtle farm where you see Olive Ridley turtles, their hatchlings and eggs. The Bhagabatpur crocodile breeding farm houses estuarine crocodiles and you can learn more about them there.

Conservation
The Sundarbans are vulnerable to floods, cyclones, rising sea levels and coastline erosion due to its geographical location of lying in the low coastal zone. The forests and their wildlife face increased salinity, higher tidal surges and permanent submergence due to rising sea levels as a result of climate change. Resident tigers here have a notorious reputation of being man-eaters because of the increasing cases of tiger attacks on humans due to the constant contact that the two species come into as they share the same finite space. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.
The cruise vessel MV Paramhamsa is designed to journey principally between Kolkata and the mangrove swamps of the Sundarbans to allow you to experience the rich wildlife and birdlife, the winding rivers, steaming islands and many creeks from the comfort of a touring boat.

Its four decks with 30 wood-lined staterooms all have large windows that ensure you never miss the luxuriant natural world and its inhabitants travelling by. Alternatively move to the top deck for better nature viewing, lounging in the sun, or enjoying star gazing. Your schedule includes wildlife safaris by small boats, birding, or visits to farming and fishing communities.

Opening Times: Open all through the year.
Location: Embarkation point - Vivada Jetty on River Hoogly, Kolkata Nearest airport - Kolkata Nearest railhead - Kolkata
Children's Policy: Children of all ages are welcome.

The boat has 18 Deluxe cabins and 12 Family cabins that are all river facing with en suite bathrooms. There are 20 rooms on the main deck and 12 on the first deck. The first deck rooms are larger and have an additional sofa bed.

Food: Meals include multi-cuisine dishes, with a smattering of local Bengali delicacies, served in a buffet style in the Mangrove restaurant on the first deck.

Activities / Special Features:
Folk and cultural dances; film shows focusing in particular on wildlife and nature; shore visits for jungle sightings in smaller vessels; guided jungle cruise; talks by environmentalists and other experts.

Tadoba-Andhari Tiger Reserve

Maharashtra

This classic teak and bamboo paradise epitomises a Central Indian jungle - from the lush green foliage in early monsoons, to the dry and dusty browns and yellows of summer, you can enjoy Tadoba's beauty throughout the year.

Often referred to as The Jewel of Vidharba, Tadoba was overlooked until very recently. Visionary management and better protection now ensures it sits amongst the best parks in India with recognised tigers and their playful cubs residing around picturesque lakes like Tadoba and Telia, and the meadows of Panderpuni, Khatoda and Jamanjhora. Recent village relocation programmes are opening up new areas and new habitats and the greater area now contains over 100 tigers in its 1,854 square kilometres area.

Tadoba is shrouded in the legends of its original inhabitants, the Gonds. Once great hunter-gatherers, they are now principally farmers and herders since the wave of Hindu settlers opened up these dark forests in the 18th and 19th centuries. Evidence of their tribal kingdoms can still be seen in the fortress of Chanda today. The name Tadoba is derived from the legend of a Gond called Taru who was killed by a tiger.

There are three tourism zones that can be accessed via one of four gates around the park - Khutwanda, Kolara, Navegaon and Mohurli.

What you can do inside the park
Game drives are largely along the more accessible and open Western side. In the Tadoba range, make sure to stop at Katezari, which is an evergreen valley, drive around Tadoba Lake and Pandharpuani meadows that have two waterholes where animals make frequent visits. In the Mohurli range, visit the Telia Lake, which is a good place to spot migratory birds and Andhari Nala is excellent for gaur sightings.

What to look out for
Apart from tigers and leopards, look for the rusty-spotted cat, sloth bear, ratel, gaur, four-horned antelope, Indian mouse deer and Indian pangolin. Over 200 bird species like paradise flycatchers, noisy coppersmith, brown-headed barbets, Indian pittas and shrikes along with 75 different types of butterflies have been spotted here. Monsoon brings out a whole raft of reptiles, snakes and animals active during the rains providing avid naturalists with new opportunities to study the small – not just the large.

Fun things to see and do outside the park
Camping facilities are available at Mohorli and Kolsa on prior booking. The nearby Bhadravati town attracts tourists for its ancient Bhadravati and Jain temples that have beautiful sculptures. There are walking nature trails and machaan lookout spots in Khutwanda; boat and canoe trips on the picturesque Irai Lake; and birding routes around lodges.

Conservation
Tadoba sits on some of India’s richest coalfields. On the road to Chandrapur, huge open cast mining operations continue and together with an expanding town have cut off migratory corridors through Brahmapuri and Nagzira forests. These corridors are absolutely vital for Tadoba’s far-roaming tigers that would otherwise crowd the fringes and increase chances of man-animal conflicts. Illegal poaching, wood chopping and overgrazing are a problem, but an eco-sensitive planning zone has stopped the advent of mass tourism. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.

Irai Safari Retreat

Located beside the village of Bhamdeli, this comfortable lodge is spread across 14 acres of naturally restored landscape overlooking the glistening waters of the Irai Lake that borders this tiger park.

Combining traditional architectural style, its eight large cottages provide comfortable yet contemporary living, with double storey sit out terraces to unwind at sundown. Eight Safari Serengeti tented rooms with attached machaan lounges are also on offer to get you closer to nature.

In house naturalists are on hand to open up the world of Tadoba’s natural riches around the lodge. Take them along for a birdwatching walk or for a safari in the park. Unwind with bicycles, table tennis, a swimming pool and an airy restaurant and lounge area.

Activities / Special Features:
- Bird watching expeditions, bullock cart rides, nature trails, cycling around the lodge and interactions with partner NGOs are part of their activity schedules for guests. Excursion trips to the nearby village can be organised on request.
- There are 8 en suite cottages with a veranda on the ground floor and a sit-out terrace on the top. The Serengeti safari tents are comfortably furnished and have a canvas covered veranda. All tents are en suite with a view of the Irai lake and the jungles beyond.

Food:
- A wide range of foods are served in buffet style in its airy restaurant and chefs can also indulge your special requests or local delicacies as desired. Alternatively arrange to have your meal in your cottage, in the machaan or overlooking the lake on request.

Svasara Jungle Lodge

Set over ten acres of land near the Kolara tribal hamlet, Svasara is a Sanskrit word meaning nest, which is exactly what the lodge aims to offer – a place of security and belonging that exists in harmony with its natural surroundings. Comfortable modern and colourfully decorated rooms reflect this approach too.

The property is today an ideal spot for birding and walking safaris in the region offering many sightings of the forest’s denizens and bird species, helped by its own tree nursery. The lodge’s Teakhouse is a pavilion made of recycled wood and other natural materials that houses an outdoor dining area, an open-air cinema, conservation centre and an outdoor barbeque pit.

Activities / Special Features:
- Safari; nature shop; wildlife library; walking trails; The Teakhouse for open-air cinema; waterhole; indigenous trees’ nursery; organic farm; pool and spa; cultural day tours; butterfly park; village tours.

Valparai is a mid-elevation hill station located 3,500 feet above sea level on the Anamalai Hills range of the Western Ghats. The name Anamalai translates to Elephant Hill after the elephants that still roam in large herds in the Protected Areas that dot the region.

According to some of the earliest records found on the region, in 1846 a man named Ramasamy Mudaliyar started a coffee plantation here. Then in 1890, Britishers Wintil and Nordan bought land from the Madras State Government and planted tea and coffee. Carwer Marsh who had experience in tea and coffee farming assisted them in their endeavour. Carwer Marsh interacted and built a close relationship with the local people and was later known as The Father of Anamalai. His statue was erected on the Kavarkal Estate to honour his devotion to the people of the region.

Valparai remains pleasant throughout the year with an average temperature of 30 degrees Celsius in the day but can go as low as 18 degrees in the winter months of December through March. June until August is the monsoon season when the hills are covered in all shades of green. The summer months of March through May could get hot with temperatures going up to 36 degrees in the daytime, but surrounded by lush forests, the cool breeze helps to cool you down.

Fun things to see and do
Private tea companies own large parts of the land in the region and a visit to one of the estates is sure to refresh any tea enthusiast. There are many interesting places to visit in Valparai. Sholayar dam, one of the largest reservoirs in South India is close by. Monkey Falls, Athirapally waterfalls, Koolangal River and Aalayar and Nirar dams are other scenic water bodies in its vicinity. The Amaravathy reservoir has many crocodiles that can be seen basking on the banks. The Balaji Temple and Karamalai Annai Velankanni Church attract many pilgrims as well.

What to look out for
For nature and wildlife enthusiasts, the nearby Anamalai Tiger Reserve, Parambikulam Tiger Reserve, Eravikulam National Park and Indira Gandhi Wildlife Sanctuary provide hours of wildlife viewing pleasure. Besides being a rich elephant tract, the area is also home to numerous leopards. Keep your eyes open for the beautiful golden and black lion-tailed macaques, gaur, sambar, the great whoosh of a great hornbill and giant squirrels. Valparai is also the habitat of the Nilgiri tahr, an endemic wild goat. These mountain goats can be found in the higher altitudes in the range of 1,200 to 2,600 metres above sea level in the southern Western Ghats. Watch these adept climbers navigate steep slopes with ease.

Conservation
There have been many developments in the region in the past few years that have blocked the elephant’s migratory corridors. Besides this, the ever-growing tea plantations have also reduced the large mammal’s territories. Efforts are being made to identify and develop corridors to reduce any man-animal conflict. Many plantation owners have also lent their support to the cause. Your visit is crucial to support the local economy, but please also report abuse or poor practice at admin@toftindia.org.
Located on a hillock in the picturesque Anamalai Hills, this old British Tea Estate Bungalow offers panoramic views of the surrounding hills and tea plantations that surround its two acres. Part of a 12,000 acre tea estate, the homestead reflects the Colonial tea planters style, with Burmese teak floors and old Victorian furniture.

Choose to stay in wooden chalets, duplex chalets in the grounds or three old bedrooms in the bungalow, each with views of the immaculate tea plantations.

Take a guided nature walk along the Koolangal and Injipara Rivers with an in-house naturalist who would point out the many birds and small animals residing here in the Western Ghats.

Activities / Special Features:
Guided nature walks; bird watching; cycling; village visits; plantation visits.

Accommodation:
Stay in the bungalow with large living space comprising 3 spacious bedrooms. Furthermore there are 5 single bedroom wooden chalets and 2 wooden suites with an additional upper floor and balconies.

Food:
Meals are always full course and often made using local recipes and ingredients. Their vegetable garden provides guests with a fresh supply of produce.

Opening Times:
Open all through the year.

Location:
Nearest airport - Coimbatore (113 km)
Nearest railhead - Coimbatore (105 km)

Children's Policy:
Children of all ages are welcome. There is a play area for kids as well.

Sundowner

Sundowner is a fully bonded Dutch tour operator specialising in tailor-made and small group wildlife holidays worldwide. We have travelled the world looking for wildlife and natural beauty in remote places. These include tiger safaris in India, Nepal and Russia. We love sharing our experience and work hard to create tours to make our clients’ wildlife dreams come true. We care for wildlife and nature and are pleased to support TOFTigers with their work conserving tigers, wildlife and wilderness in India.

Thika Travel

Thika Travel specialises in individually tailored journeys to exclusive destinations like the Polar Regions, Latin America, Safari-Africa, the Indian Ocean, and the Indian Subcontinent. The focus is on having unique experiences, visiting places where nature is unspoiled, where authenticity still remains and the needs of local communities are met. We care about the places we travel to and do our best to keep it for future generations. This is also why we support TOFTigers with their campaign for tiger conservation.
